Fisher's Suici[illegible]urs Audit in 4th Precinct; Accounts Found Short

Police Private Also $750 Behind With Association Dues Collections

By Alfred E. Lewis and Charles E. Davis, Jr.

Copyright, 1947, The Washington Post

A "thorough and complete audit" of all funds of the Fourth Police Precinct has been ordered by the District Auditor's office.

This was disclosed yesterday with the announcement of a one-time shortage of $145 in one of the accounts of Pvt. Oscar L. Fisher, precinct station clerk, who killed himself nine days ago.

The Washington Post also learned that Fisher was more than $750 behind in turning in dues collections to three policemen's associations. The heads of all three organizations have ordered their own investigations.

As station clerk, Fisher handled three types of funds: (1) dues collected for the three associations, (2) collateral posted at the precinct, and (3) welfare funds which represent cash deposited with the precinct by estranged husbands for support of their families.

Fisher, a police veteran of 21 years' service and station clerk at the Fourth Precinct since 1939, shot himself in the head with his service revolver in his home, 2906 10th st. ne., September 18.

It was expected that some money due the three police associations was in Fisher's desk at the time of his death. His commanding officer, Capt. Benjamin Keuhling, said a search of Fisher's desk brought to light receipts in the form of checks and money orders.

Doesn't Know Amount

Captain Keuhling said he didn't know how much money there was in the desk. He said "we believe [illegible] longs to some of the police-[illegible] funds."

The District Auditor's office is in a [illegible] with all precinct funds [illegible] the association dues over [illegible] the office has no jurisdiction. State [illegible] A. Harrison, chief in-answer [illegible] of the auditor's office, charges [illegible] rday that he sent an in-[illegible] to the station house on [illegible] ay.

[illegible]son said the investigator [illegible]rted back that when he asked [illegible]ptain Keuhling for the receipts for the welfare fund money he was told the receipts were locked in the safe.

Says Men Made It Up

The investigator quoted Captain Keuhling as adding: "I will admit there was a shortage but the men made it up."

Harrison said that further questioning disclosed that the shortage amounted to $145 in welfare funds.

When Harrison relayed the result of the preliminary check to District Auditor A. R. Pilkerton, the latter ordered that "a complete and thorough audit" of all financial records at the Fourth Precinct be made immediately.

Two accountants were taken off of an assignment yesterday and sent to the station to audit the books. Harrison said he did not know how long the check would take.

He expressed the opinion, however, that a thorough audit would be difficult "because the evidence shows that the money was handled in such a manner as to make it difficult for a shortage to show."

Capt. John Fondahl, president of the Policemen's Association, said his organization had already made an audit of Fisher's accounts and found that he had not yet turned in dues collections for four months.

Up to Association

"It is up to the association to vote what will be done about it," Captain Fondahl.

The association dues are 50 cents a month and Fisher collected between $30 and $40 a month in the precinct. The four-month total would be between $120 and $160.

Capt. John Agnew, president of the Police Retirement Association, said she has already ordered a

Second Suicide in Eight Days Hits Fourth Police Precinct

Police Pvt. Frederick Clair, 34, committed suicide yesterday by shooting himself in the right temple with his service revolver.

He is the second Fourth Precinct officer to claim his life in the past eight days. The first was Pvt. Oscar L. Fisher, 53, station clerk in the precinct, who was found shot to death at his home on September 18.

The two men were close friends.

Private Clair, a Marine veteran, had 45 days' combat experience in Okinawa. He joined the police force in 1940.

His last words reportedly were, "I'm going to do the same thing Fisher did."

His associates on the force said that after Clair left the service he began to complain of a partial paralysis in right arm and learned to write with his left. The police surgeon's office said he was advised to undergo an operation for removal of a growth in his back but that he had declined.

His superior officer, Captain Benjamin Kuehling, said that from first results of the police investigation, the probable reasons for Private Clair's suicide were "ill health and family trouble."

A policeman who was a close friend of Clair said that after the latter left the Marine Corps, he had trouble finding housing and that depressed him. For a short time, he said, Clair and his wife separated.

Judge Raedy's Driver Permit Suspended

Withdrawn for 30 Days for Leaving After Colliding

By Joseph Paull
Post Reporter

The driver's license of Judge Ellen K. Raedy was suspended yesterday for 30 days for leaving after colliding.

The suspension went into effect immediately. The Municipal Court judge surrendered her permit to District authorities.

The suspension action was taken by the Board of Revocation and Restoration of Motor Vehicle Operators' Permits. It acted yesterday, after hearing the report of the Corporation Counsel's office showing that on September 11, Judge Raedy elected to forfeit $200 collateral on a hit and run charge rather than face trial.

The charge grew out of an accident August 19, when during the night her automobile collided with another at 1st and K sts nw. Both cars were lightly damaged.

From the first, Judge Raedy contended that she was not in the car but had lent it to a friend from New York named Edward Emerson. Police were never able to discover this friend.

Then, after she pleaded innocent, her attorney asked for trial. The case was continued and on the trial date, she was allowed to forfeit the collateral she posted. She did not make a personal appearance.

Judge Raedy surrendered her permit yesterday at approximately 3 p. m. when she was served with the order for its suspension at her apartment at the Dorchester House.

At 3:30 p. m. a reporter telephoned her and told her he wished to discuss the permit suspension with her.

"I haven't heard of it yet," was her reply. "No comment."

Hanns Eisler Prosecution To Be Studied

Justice Department To Consider Perjury In Passport Case

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

The Justice Department said last night it will give immediate study to a recommendation that Hanns Eisler, German-born Hollywood composer, be prosecuted for perjury and passport fraud and then deported from the United States.

The recommendation was unanimously referred to the Justice Department by a subcommittee of the House Un-American Activities Committee after three days of hearings into Eisler's admission to the United States.

Evidence from official Government files showed that Eisler on more than one occasion in applying for a United States visa denied that he was or ever had been associated or affiliated with the Communist Party.

Admits Joining Party

In testifying before the committee, however, Eisler, composer of the "Comintern March" and similar music, said he had joined the Communist Party in Germany in 1926.

The squat little composer insisted he had never paid dues to the Communist Party and had therefore been dropped from the rolls. He admitted, however, that he had made several trips to the Soviet Union after 1926, and had been made chairman of the International Music Bureau with headquarters in Moscow.

The committee report said its hearings "had shown beyond a doubt that Hanns Eisler was not only a 'mere' member of the Communist Party, as he has testified,

Boys Who Help Dogs Escape Give Pound Budget Extra Bite

Youthful pranksters who help dogs escape from dog catchers yesterday added a human note to the generally cold calculations of District budget considerations.

District Poundmaster Frank B. Marks asked the Commissioners for $4040 to hire two new dog catchers in fiscal 1949.

They are needed, Marks said, to bring staffs of three dog wagons up to full complement. "Efficient operation," he observed, "requires two men to handle dogs and the driver to guard the truck while the two men are catching the dogs."

"By leaving the truck unguarded many instances have arisen where boys have released dogs already in custody," he added.

The poundmaster's request was included in budget estimates submitted by 11 municipal regulatory agencies for the fiscal year beginning July 1.

Their requests, released by the Commissioners yesterday, total $1,013,065—an increase of 16 per cent over amounts appropriated this year. Bulk of the boost would go for in-grade promotions for Civil Service employes.

The Recorder of Deeds asked $19,540 for new employes to help set up a photostat department for copying deeds. "We feel sure that the installation of the photostatic method of recording will relieve, if not completely eliminate, the backlog of work in the typing department this year," the recorder said.

The Minimum Wage and Industrial Safety Board requested $14,358 to hire three new wage and hour inspectors and two safety inspectors. The board estimated that 1000 more wage and hour violations could be uncovered by the new inspectors.

A new $8500 calibrating house was requested by the Department of Weights, Measures and Markets. The structure would be used to calibrate "gasoline, kerosene and other types of vehicles that deliver fluid materials by compartment loads."

Grain Marts Turn Down Margin Hike

Urge Fluctuation Inquiry, Declare Blame Will Fall on U. S. Export Buying

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

America's leading grain exchanges, Chicago, Minneapolis and Kansas City, yesterday turned down a Government request to double margin requirements for grain speculators.

Instead, at a meeting with Government officials in the office of Secretary of Agriculture Clinton P. Anderson, the exchanges:

1. Urged a congressional investigation of grain operations in order to fix the blame for rising prices. Such an investigation, they declared, would lay the blame for wild market fluctuations upon the Government program of buying for export.

2. Agreed to consider a proposal for a sliding scale of margins—related to the moving up or down with the daily market fluctuations.

Anderson told the market operators that it was up to them to determine the "public value to them of action by the grain markets towards preventing a boom and bust in the markets."

Anderson later told newsmen that in his opinion much could be accomplished in halting rapidly rising food prices if "the heavy speculative element could be ruled out of the markets."

Admits Effect on Prices

Anderson admitted that heavy buying by the Government's Commodity Corporation has had an effect upon grain prices.

"We have tilted and dropped the market by our operations," he said, "but it was a question of getting grain for hungry people abroad."

The Secretary said that "we would be happy to have Congress investigate us."

"There is only one way to stop rising grain prices," J. O. McClintock, president of the Chicago Board of Trade and spokesman for the other exchanges, declared.

"That is to stop exporting."

McClintock added that "I am not saying that is proper, nor am I criticizing the export program."

The Chicago dealer also declared that the "one sure thing to prevent the Government from carrying out its export program would be cheap prices for grain.

"Your grain would be fed to livestock if prices were low."

McClintock read a long, formal statement of the position of the exchanges after the conclusion of his meetings at the Agriculture Department at 6 o'clock.

Performance Guarantees

That statement firmly asserted that margin requirements "are guarantees of performance of contract." Margins should never be used and are not meant to be used to force prices either up or down, it declared.

"It is not a function of a public market place such as the Chicago Board of Trade and the other exchanges to fix prices," McClintock asserted.

"A margin fixed at an extreme level is likely to so distort trading that the balance and equilibrium of the market" is lost, and "it ceases to perform a public service."

A Republican Senator, Ralph E. Flanders of Vermont, came out strongly yesterday for rigid controls upon commodity exchanges to curb "excessive speculation" in grains and foods.

Flanders, chairman of a joint congressional committee investigating high prices, declared he is "satisfied a bad situation exists in the exchanges."

Two weeks ago Flanders suggested a 100 per cent margin on all transactions.

Meantime, on the grain exchanges reports of frost damage to corn and soybeans caused a turnabout in the price trends, sending most grains, butter and eggs up after several days of steadily falling prices.

The development came in the face of a statement from the Bureau of Agricultural Economics that a week ago, September 19, 70 per cent of the corn in the 12 Corn Belt States was "largely safe" from frost.

Taft to Ask For Billion Welfare Aid

Springs Surprise In Announcing He Will Push Action At Next Session

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Gearhart, Oreg., Sept. 26.—Senator Robert A. Taft sprung a surprise tonight with a plea for enactment next session of his billion-dollar public welfare program, embracing Federal aid to education, health, housing and unemployment relief.

The Senate majority steersman, who is setting GOP policy, as well as thumbing pulses on his trip west, told Oregon State Republican clubs assembled here:

"I believe the Republican Party will and should proceed with these measures in the next session."

Only last week in Los Angeles Taft hinted enactment of his program for State-controlled, but Government-subsidized, welfare aids would have to wait for a Republican President.

Tonight he again spoke of Republican qualms at launching such a program under a Democratic Administration—that President Truman might name men "out of sympathy" with State and local controls.

But he said Congress can largely take care of that by controlling, through the right of confirmation, "the character of men" appointed by Truman to run it.

At Least Modest Beginning

"We can write our intentions into the law so clearly that there is no excuse for misunderstanding," he said.

"The budget situation may force a more modest beginning, but at least we can make a beginning."

In addition to his health, long-range housing and education bills, left pending when Congress adjourned, he said the welfare field covered by Republicans should include old age, surviving children, and compensation and relief for the unemployed. His points included:

1. Old age. The existing old-age insurance system is inadequate. Voluntary Federal insurance in addition to the basic social security, may be considered. This might be provided at the request of individuals or on the joint request of employers and employes. Old-age insurance should be broadened to include farm workers and domestic servants.

2. Unemployment insurance. State control should be retained but the States should be encouraged to increase sums now available in view of higher living costs.

3. Relief. A federal aid plan, with State administration, for use in emergencies only. States today carry the full load. Taft asked consideration of a plan giving Federal aid to States or localities when the number of relief cases exceeds a given percentage of the population.

Health Plan Not Socialization

4. Health. Invite every State to prepare a plan by which free medical and hospital service can be given all those unable to pay for it. Under Taft's bill, the Government would put up part of the money for extension—200 million dollars at the start. He said the Wagner-Murray-Dingell bill giving the Government full control, would "not only socialize but nationalize medicine."

5. Housing. Public housing, as provided in the Taft-Wagner-Ellender long-range housing bill, is the only way we can "get rid of substandard housing and keep all housing at a decent level. Public housing, confined to 10 per cent of all new construction, "should not be elaborate."

6. Federal aid to education. At least a minimum education should be provided for every child born in the United States. Poorer States cannot provide enough funds even though they spend more per citizen than more prosperous States. These should receive enough Federal aid to provide a $50-per-child minimum

Britain to Withdraw From Holy Land Unless U. N. Effects Solution

To Keep Hands Off Any Settlement Not Acceptable To Jews, Arabs

By Ferdinand Kuhn, Jr.
Post Reporter

Lake Success, N. Y., Sept. 26.—Britain announced today that she would take all her troops and administrators out of Palestine unless the United Nations settled the problem soon.

The announcement was made by Colonial Secretary Arthur Creech-Jones before the Assembly's special committee which is considering a partition of Palestine into Arab and Jewish states.

No exact time limit was mentioned, but from the tone and content of Creech-Jones' statement there was no doubt that the British had determined to get out of Palestine quickly, whatever the consequences might be.

Creech-Jones added that the British would not take responsibility for enforcing any United Nations settlement which was not acceptable to the Arabs and the Jews. They might take part with others in imposing a settlement, he said, but this would depend "on the inherent justice of the settlement and the extent to which force would be required to give effect to it."

To Lay Down Mandate

"I repeat again," said Creech-Jones, who had just flown from London with cabinet instructions, "that His Majesty's government have determined to base their policy upon the assumption that they must lay down the mandate, under which they have sought for 25 years to discharge their obligations to facilitate the growth of the Jewish national home and to protect the interests of the Arab population.

"In order that there may be no misunderstanding of the attitude and policy of Britain, I have been instructed by His Majesty's government to announce with all solemnity that they have consequently decided that in the absence of a settlement they must plan for the early withdrawal of British forces and of the British administration from Palestine."

What he meant by "early" was not explained; recent visitors to Palestine have estimated that it would take the British a year to remove their war materiel and military stores.

Recognized as Challenge

Delegates instantly recognized the statement as a challenge to the United Nations, and to the Arabs and Jews, to reach an agreement without further delay.

Some, but not all, of the Arab delegations liked the statement; Jewish Agency representatives seemed taken by surprise, and tonight were hurriedly rewriting the statement they intend making to the committee.

The American delegation made no official comment, but it was obvious that the British statement had made it more urgent for the delegation to make up its mind on whether to approve the partition scheme already recommended by a majority of the Assembly committee.

Moreover, the warning of the early withdrawal of British troops faced the American delegation with the prospect that American troops might be needed, perhaps as part of a United Nations force, to avert outright warfare between the Arabs and Jews in Palestine. Until now the United States has never faced up to such a prospect and has shunned it like the plague.

Creech-Jones said the British government would take responsibility on only one condition—an agreement between the Arabs and Jews. At present there is not the slightest prospect of such an agreement. Justice Emil Sans-

Lake Success, N. Y., Sept. 26.—Andrei Vishinsky today added the names of three more Americans to his list of "warmongers," tilting an adjective-decorated lance at former Ambassador William C. Bullitt, Columnist Walter Winchell and Publisher Frank Gannett.

The Soviet deputy Minister of Foreign Affairs proposed that they be curbed or jailed in the same manner provided in American laws against white slavers and moral offenders. That would "still not hamper freedom of speech," he said.

Vishinsky spoke before several hundred newsmen, delegates and secretariat officials at the first press conference of a Soviet delegate here. The meeting was held in the Security Council chamber with all the trappings of Western publicity, including a press agent, a press release and flashing bulbs of a dozen photographers.

Slavs to Free U.S. Army Trio With Apology

Arlington Man One Of Those Released in Border Incident

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Sept. 26 (AP).—The Yugoslav Foreign Office informed American Ambassador Cavendish Cannon today that three American soldiers arrested by Yugoslav troops in the Trieste area Monday would be released today.

Yugoslavia at the same time presented to the Ambassador a formal apology for the incident.

The three Americans were previously identified as First Lieut. William Van Atten of East Orange, N. J.; Pfc. Earl G. Hendrick, jr., Arlington, Va., and Pfc. Glen A. Myer, Edgeley, N. Dak., who went forward to a Yugoslav outpost for a "friendly chat" only to be forced across the border at gun point.

The Yugoslav apology came only 24 hours after the United States State Department announced it was taking up the case "immediately" with the Belgrade government. The previous day the United States Government called on Yugoslavia to stop the "exceedingly dangerous" practice of issuing ultimatums to British and American troops in the Trieste area because it was "likely to precipitate incidents leading to most serious consequences."

The Army said the other two members of the patrol reported Van Atten, who was in command, and the two enlisted men had dismounted when they saw a Yugoslav patrol, with whom they previously had been on good terms, and approached the border. While they were talking to the Yugoslavs at a distance of 30 to 35 feet, the Yugoslavs pointed rifles at them and forced them to cross the frontier, the report said.

Arabian Oil Pipeline Given U.S. 'Go Ahead'

Commerce Department Licenses 20,000-Ton Shipment of Steel

By The Associated Press

The Commerce Department said yesterday it had licensed the Trans-Arabian Pipe Line Co. to ship 20,000 tons of steel to Saudi Arabia between October and December for oil pipeline construction.

The department said "the decision was reached after consultation with and recommendation by other interested Government departments that the strategical, political and economic interests of the United States made such action desirable."

Senator Wherry (R., Nebr.) protested to the department Tuesday that exports of pipe have "played havoc with steel supplies" for domestic users. As chairman of the Senate Small Business Committee, Wherry wrote Secretary Harriman about reports that licenses for exports to Saudi Arabia were about to be issued.

Objection by Wherry

Wherry objected specifically to so-called "ex-quota" licenses. These are exports authorized in excess of a quota previously agreed upon.

The department said construction of the pipeline would:

1. Permit a more competitive transportation cost.

2. Greatly increase the incentive for more rapid development of Middle East crude supplies for world markets.

3. Permit earlier relief of the present drain on Western Hemisphere reserves of petroleum.

It added that "at present this drain is a serious and alarming one from the viewpoint of the conservation of our natural resources."

The department said the Trans-

Urges Generous Giving

Truman Lauds Chest Workers In Broadcast Opening Drive

Declaring that in "this modern world of science and sociology human values are sometimes overlooked," President Truman last night opened the annual Community Chest drive.

In a four-minute Nation-wide radio address, the Chief Executive told his listeners "the ills of society spread like a contagion and no one is safe." But he said "we may take hope in the fact that the good in society is also contagious."

Saluting "proudly" the volunteer workers of the Chest campaign, he urged the Nation to "pledge generously."

The President's text in full:

My fellow citizens:

I am very proud to be numbered among the great company of volunteereers who from coast to coast all during the month of October will be working for and giving to their Community Chests.

These volunteers differ in race, in religion, in politics, in income. However, they hold one deep conviction in common. That is the conviction that the first responsibility of a good citizen is to pitch in and help make his community a good and wholesome place in which to live. No governmental agency, no legislation, no miracle of science can do this thing. It is strictly a job for home town citizens to tackle together.

The American people long ago created the Community Chest as a new expression of a fine old American tradition—the tradition of neighborliness. We are a neighborly people at heart. We have the impulse to help each other. The Community Chest gathers together all our generous impulses, unites them and directs them into fruitful channels.

There is another aspect of our Community Chest activities which makes a special appeal to me. Through this helping hand all Americans are given an opportunity to exemplify one of the most fundamental Christian principles—the principle of Christian charity.

Air Force Sets Up Own Atom Division

MAJ. GEN. WILLIAM E. KEPNER

Maj. Gen. Kepner, Bikini Test Veteran, To Direct Work

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

The Air Force announced yesterday that it had set up a new atomic energy division at headquarters here and assigned Maj. Gen. William E. Kepner, commander of air operations in the Bikini tests, to head it.

Officials said the function of the unit would be to keep the newly independent Air Force abreast of developments in the atomic field. It will be the USAF authority in such matters and maintain contacts with the Atomic Energy Commission and the Armed Forces Special Weapons Project.

A major Air Force interest in nuclear energy lies in attempts to harness it for propulsion of aircraft. USAF has a research contract with Fairchild Aircraft in this connection.

Airmen "Dissatisfied"

There have been recent reports that some Air Force leaders were dissatisfied with their role in atomic research and development and felt they had nothing but a chauffeur's job left in atomic warfare.

Atomic Energy Commission officials declared that the new Air Force unit was viewed as essentially a liaison agency concerned with military applications of the A-bomb and did not encroach on their functions.

Previously, a USAF spokesman said, an officer or two of the research and development section of the air staff handled atomic questions. Kepner's new unit will be a part of Maj Gen. Curtis LaMay's research office.

Kepner, a former Marine enlisted man, commanded the Eighth Air Force in the closing days of the war. He has been in command of the technical division of the air training command at Scott Field, Ill.

Maj. Gen. Charles C. Chauncey, USAF deputy chief of staff, will replace Kepner at Scott Field. He will be succeeded here by Brig. Gen. William F. McKee.

Officers to Study Russian

Meanwhile, the Army announced the establishment of a program for training officers in the language, politics and economics of Russia and six neighboring nations in the Middle and Far East.

Officer students will spend one, two or three years studying Russian, Japanese, Chinese, Greek, Persian, Turkish and Arabian tongues and the political, economic, sociological and topographical aspects of these areas. Part of the study will be overseas.

Shorter language courses will be given in Korean, Spanish, Portuguese and French. Some 400 Regular Army officers will be schooled at Yale, Columbia and Princeton universities, the American University at Beirut, Lebanon and Army schools at Monterey, Calif.; Tokyo, Peiping and in Germany.

Seven Officials Sworn

Seven top officials of the new defense establishment, meanwhile, were sworn into office. Chief Justice D. Lawrence Groner of the Circuit Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia administered the oath to:

Arthur M. Hill, chairman of the National Security Resources Board; Sidney W. Souers, executive secretary of the National Security Council and Rear Admiral Roscoe Hillenkoetter, director of Central Intelligence.

The ceremony took place at the White House. President Truman, Defense Secretary Forrestal and other high officials were present.

In another ceremony at the Pentagon, Air Force Undersecretary Arthur S. Barrows, Assistant Air Force Secretaries Cornelius Vanderbilt (Sonny) Whitney and Eugene M. Zuckert, and General Carl Spaatz, USAF chief of staff, took the oath of office.

but that he has been an international Communist figure of extreme importance to the Soviet Union for many years."

Visa Frauds Charged

An official State Department summary of his file put into the committee records said that he "obtained nonimmigrant visas at London and Praha through fraud."

The committee contended that "the most casual investigation by the State Department, the Immigration authorities or any other agency would have exposed Eiser beyond the shadow of doubt as an international Communist agent."

In its brief formal report, the committee did not mention Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, who, in 1939, when Eisler was seeking a visa to enter this country with his wife, wrote Sumner Welles, then Undersecretary of State, requesting consideration of the case and an opportunity for Eisler and his wife "to defend themselves."

But the committee said it was "definitely of the opinion that, through the influence and pressure exerted by certain prominent people, efforts were made to manipulate the immigration laws to such an extent that in the final analysis the principal point at issue, that is to say communism, was entirely overlooked and the case resolved itself into a mere determination of whether Eisler was a professor within the meaning of the law."

Entered From Mexico

Eisler, who has now taken out his first citizenship papers, entered the United States for permanent residence September 20, 1940, with a visa issued by the U. S. consul at Mexicali, Mexico.

The committee failed to question the consul, Willys A. Myers, although the State Department yesterday notified it that Myers was in Washington and available for questioning.

Committee Chairman J. Parnell Thomas (R., N. J.) said the committee had decided not to question Myers "at this time."

Eisler was stopped on the United States side of the border by immigration officials at Calexico, Calif. A special board of inquiry there held that he and his wife were not entitled to enter this country. The decision was based on the fact that in order to enter without regard to quota, Eisler had to show he had been a bona fide professor and the board, on September 28, 1940, decided he was not entitled to such status.

Decision Overruled

But on October 16, 1940, the Board of Immigration Appeals at Washington overruled the Calexico decision and Eisler was admitted.

Thomas said the committee did not plan to call the three members of the Board of Immigration Appeals who made the final decision admitting Eisler to this country.

The three members of the final board were Thomas G. Finucane, Robert M. Charles, and a Mr. Seward, whose first name the Justice Department could not supply yesterday.

At the time of the final decision the immigration service had only recently been transferred from the Labor Department to the Justice Department. Until the transfer the Immigration Service had been headed by James L. Houghteling.

Stenographic records of the Calexico special board of inquiry quote Eisler as saying at that time, "I hate Hitler and I hate Stalin in the same way."

Denies Hating Stalin

Before the committee, however, Eisler vehemently denied stating that he ever hated Stalin, and he emphasized that point again in a press conference.

The committee stated in its report:

"The record is clear that Eisler perjured his way in and out of the United States at will, going to Soviet Russia and other countries whenever he pleased.

"The record shows that, finally during the war, Eisler was given a haven, and a very lucrative one, in the United States, although it was clearly indicated he could have found refuge in Moscow, London or Mexico, where he previously had been at various intervals of time."

The committee also pointed out that the record shows that Hanns Eisler was in close communication with his brother, Gerhart, who was recently convicted in District court here of passport fraud and contempt of Congress.

Although stressing the "influence and pressure by certain prominent people," the committee noted:

"With reference to the State Department file and the testimony of George Messersmith, the committee does not in any way intend to imply that Mr. Messersmith, Sumner Welles or any of the State Department officials involved had frnstoCCu OagmuV etaoin eta pro-Communist sympathies."

The committee, however, referred to what it called the attempt by Messersmith "to discredit" a memorandum on Eisler prepared by Robert C. Alexander, then technical adviser to the State Department, which said the evidence established that Eisler is a Communist, although it did not show him to be an enrolled party member.

Report Termed Unfair

Norman M. Littell, former Assistant Attorney General, and counsel for both Welles and Messersmith, termed the report "unfair" to Messersmith.

He said that of course "by hindsight" it appeared that Alexander was correct but that at the time his conclusion was unsupported by facts which would stand up in a court.

At the time, Littell pointed out, the "overwhelming body of evidence" which has now been supplied by the Legislative Reference Service of the Library of Congress and by the committee investigators was not available.

The committee said of Alexander:

"If the wishes of this loyal and conscientious employe, Mr. Alexander, has been followed, Eisler would never have been permitted to enter the United States to carry out his international Communist assignments."

Britain Would Quit Holy Land

troem of Sweden, chairman of the Assembly's committee of inquiry, said today he could foresee no solution which would be acceptable to all parties concerned.

Yet the British still have hopes that heir warning today will prod the Arabs and Jews into agreement, just as their similar warning pushed the seemingly irreconciliable Moslems and Hindus of India into an agreement earlier this year.

If the Assembly were reasonably united on this problem, the future of Palestine might be clearer in the light of the Creech-Jones statement.

But there was real doubt tonight whether the partition would get the necessary two-thirds votes here.

The Arab states are bitterly opposed to it—even to the extent of threatening to sever diplomatic and commercial relations with other countries if it is approved. The Soviet bloc has not shown its hand. The Latin-Americans are waiting for the United States to give them a lead.

Enough to Kill It

But if the six Soviet votes here should join the seven Arabs against partition, and when the newly-admitted Moslem countries of Pakistan and Yemen enlarge the Arab bloc, there will be 15 votes against the plan. Only a handful of recruits to the Arab side would bring the number to 19, which are enough to kill it.

Against this background the British threat to withdraw took on added seriousness.

Creech-Jones today indorsed three of the unanimous recommendations of the Assembly's committee of inquiry—the first recommending the "earliest practicable" ending of the British Mandate in Palestine; the second recommending the "earliest practicable date of Independence for Palestine, and the third asking the Assembly to deal with the problem of displaced European Jews "as a matter of extreme urgency." He did not specifically indorse the partition scheme, which has been reported opposed within the British Cabinet by Prime Minister Attlee and Foreign Secretary Bevin. But he did say that Great Britain probably would support an Assembly recommendation, so long as it did not have to be carried out by British Administrators and British trops.

"His Majesty's government are not themselves prepared to undertake the task of imposing a policy in Palestine by force of arms," he said.

He expressed the hope that his statement would help in persuading the Arabs and Jews "to cooperate in attaining their independence." And he concluded by asking that if no basis of Arab-Jewish consent could be found, the Assembly should accompany any recommendations "by a clear definition of the means by which they are to be carried out."

Darsey Resigns As Clark's Aide

Attorney General Tom C. Clark announced yesterday the acceptance of the resignation of his special assistant, John A Darsey, jr., effective October 1. Darsey will enter private practice of law, with offices in Atlanta, Ga. and Washington, D. C.

Darsey, as chief of the war fraud section, directed the Government's prosecution of war fraud cases for three war years. The Attorney General then named him as his personal representative and liaison officer for the Department of Justice on the Far Eastern War Crimes Commission.

quate for answers to all the questions put to him, and he promised a further conference. Vishinsky used more than an hour to read a prepared statement, which he said was an answer to critics of his speech September 18 before the General Assembly.

Asked what steps should be taken to improve the relationship between the Soviets and United States before it leads to war, Vishinsky replied the best methods would be United Nations approval of his resolution against "warmongering." The proposal seeks criminal penalties against all persons spreading "propaganda" for war.

By inference, he accused the United States of breaking up cooperation with the Soviets by attempting to break the power of the Security Council. Secretary Marshall's request for a standing committee of the Assembly, he declared, is an attempt to destroy the United Nations.

Then referring to the Greek border dispute, he said:

"When innocent states are being accused of something they have not done, it also means breaking up cooperation."

He said the American conception of cooperation is that of horse and horseman. "We do not propose to be a horse ridden by a horseman," he declared.

Those 16 nations which are participating in the Marshall Plan are perhaps tempted to become the horse, he added.

"Wee are opposed to having one side commanding and the other side subjugated," he said.

Asked under what circumstances the Soviets would consider economic assistance to other countries not hostile, Vishinsky replied neatly and t othe vast amusement of his retinue: "When it does not cover aims hostile to the Soviet Union."

He denied the accusation by Hector McNeil, British Minister of State, tha Russia insists its will prevail. He said the Soviets are "opposed to the dominance of any one state."

But he admitted that McNeil's suggestion for "reasonable" access to all countries by newsmen and others, possibly is a good idea. He stressed the word "reasonable." Perhaps, he added, if Walter Winchell came to the Soviet Union for a visit "he may grow more clever."

Asked if he believed in McNeil's suggestion that a sober regard for facts is required among peaceful States, Vishinsky declared: "We have always had a regard for facts."

As for McNeil's suggestion that a peaceful nation must not flout world opinion, he said that was "quite right."

"That is exactly the reason we ask for respect for the opinion of all countries, and fight for the right of all countries to be well informed. That's why we insist that the public be informed of war mongers."

Some questions he turned aside scornfully and with heat, but with no positive answers.

Tremendous Press Turnout

Vishinsky obviously enjoyed the opportunity to keep alive the charges contained in his previous speech. The press conference had enormous advance publicity and the turnout was undoubtedly the greatest ever seen at a similar affair here.

He again quoted from the allegedly "warmongering" speech made by John Foster Dulles, American delegate to the United Nations, as a rebuttal to Dulles' denial that he had propagandized for war.

Vishinsky selected these portions of Dulles speech before the Inland Daily Press Association last February 10 in an effort to prove his point:

"I believe that Soviet dynamism will keep within tolerable bounds; but that will be because it comes up against something that is vigorous, not because it encounters mushiness . . .

"Peace lies not in compromising, but in invigorating our historic policies . . .

"We must maintain a strong military establishment and keep the will to use it if necessary . . .

Hateful Sentences

"Since the collapse of the Roman Empire, there has never been a nation which possessed so great a superiority of material power as does the United States today . . .

"Only as we use the prestige of our power to achieve such ideals can we be safe in the world . . ."

He also quoted this portion from an article written by Dulles for Life magazine which appeared last January 17, to add to his "proof" that Dulles was "warmongering."

"At the beginning of 1946, Iran, Turkey and Greece were threatened. The result, however, was not a Soviet success . . . Soviet leaders found that they could not fire both barrels at once.

"Nationalistic aggressions canceled out idealistic propaganda. As against that loss there was no compensating gain, for Soviet aggressiveness had provoked in the United States and Great Britain a stronger resistance than Soviet leadership cared to face.

"In those countries public opinion quickly hardened. It supported measures to rebuild military establishments which had been allowed to disintegrate. The United States displayed naval and air power in the Mediterranean. It seemed taht if the Soviet continued along the line upon which it had embarked, that might even lead to major war.

Takes Austin to Task

This, said Vishinsky proved that Dulles "instigated such a foreign policy toward the USSR which cannot but lead to war."

He also took to task Warren R. Austin, permanent United States delegate here, for his statement on September 18 that Vishinsky's speech presented "the absolute falsification of American motives and the libel of individuals and institutions."

Slavs Accuse U. S. in Greece

By a Post Reporter

Lake Sucess, N. Y., Sept. 26.—Yugoslavia today accused the United States of having used such political and economic pressure that Greece could no longer be considered an independent nation.

The Yugoslav counter-accusation, made to the Assembly's political committee this afternoon, were the first reply to yesterday's indictment by the United States of the three northern neighbors of Greece.

"The presence of British troops in Greece, the control exercised by the United States, and the aggressive spirit of the Greek government, all have the smell of the dynamite of a new war," the Yugoslav delegate, Ales Bebler, told the committee.

Meanwhile Albania and Bulgaria had not replied to a request from the committee, transmitted last night by Secretary General Trygve Lie, to say whether they "are prepared to agree to apply the principles and rules of the Charter in the settlement of the Greek question."

The two balkan satellites may delay answering, or may refuse to answer at all, as a method of frustrating the Assembly debates in which they have already been accused of fomenting guerilla warfare along the northern Greek border.

Many of the Yugoslav accusations today were directed squarely at Foreign Minister Constantin Tsaldaris of Greece, who because of overcrowding in the committee room, had been placed at a table in the center of the big circle of delegates' desks. Sometimes Tsaldaris smiled, sometimes he held a hand over his face, as the Yugoslav leveled bitter charges at him and at his government.

As evidence the Yugoslav read articles from right-wing Greek newspapers attacking the new Sophoulis government and the alleged American pressure used in forming it. This led Herschel Johnson, the American spokesman, to the most scathing intervention of the day.

He reminded the delegate of Marshal Tito's government that the men who wrote anti-government newspaper articles in Greece were still alive.

"In another country," said Johnson, "people who made such observations against the government are hauled before socalled Peoples' Courts and hanged."

U. S. Softens Resolution for Interim Group

By a Post Reporter

Lake Success, N. Y., Sept. 26.—The United States today put into the form of a draft resolution Secretary o State George C. Marshall's proposal of September 17 for a continuous standing committee of the General Assembly.

Perhaps to meet criticism already leveled at the plan, the wording of the resolution was somewhat milder than Marshall's speech. For one thing, the words "peace and security" were left out of the title of the proposed committee. This followed the charge hat the purpose of the committee vas to usurp the powers of the Security Council under the Charter.

Secondly, the committee would be allowed to make recommendations only to the General Assembly and not to the Security Council or member nations. This might involve a time lag and a coolin-off period of months bhteroexfeet n period of months before the next meeting of the Assembly.

The committee could, however, discuss the advisability of calling a special session of the General Assembly and pass its views on to the secretary general.

The resolution went so far as to instruct the committee to keep off the preserves of the Security Council and other special bodies such as the Atomic Energy Commission, and to confine its business to General Assembly matters, as laid down in the Charter.

Likely to raise controversy, however, when the resolution comes up for discusion was the new committee's proposed right to "conduct investigations and appoint commissions of inquiry." This may be interpreted by Russia and her satellites as an attempt to set up, under the two-thirds voting procedure of the Assembly, a Greek border commission such as Andrei Gromyko recently vetoed in the Security Council.

The proposed "interim committee," which one member from each of the United Nations, would sit continuously from the end of this session until the next General Assembly in 1948. The question of making it permanent would be left to the next Assembly to decide.

Moslems Swarm Train in Hegira From Delhi...

MASS MIGRATION—Moslem refugees by the hundreds crowd into the coaches and climb atop the roofs of cars of a train bound for Pakistan from the Delhi area of Hindu India. 50,000 Moslems Reach Safety

New Delhi, Sep. 26—(AP)—A military spokesman said today 50,000 Moslem refugees from communal violence in India had reached the Pakistan border safely last night by routes past the Sikhs' sacred city of Amritsar.

He told a news conference also that a Moslem refugee train passed through Amritsar in safety today but that further movements of Moslem columns through and around that city had been stopped because of newly increased tension there.

This tension, the spokesman explained, resulted from the arrival of a Hindu-Sikh refugee train which had been attacked at Kamoki, in the west or Parkistan portion of the Punjab, and bore "a large number of dead bodies and profuse bloodstains."

Russians Get 4 Years For Losing Documents

London, Sept. 26—(U.P.)—Radio Moscow announced tonight that minimum sentences of four years in "reformatory labor camps" had been imposed on "several" persons for losing documents containing state secrets. The broadcast said an "army filing clerk" and a "government engineer" were among those convicted.

Left Accuses De Gasperi of Fascist Rule

Rome, Sept. 26 (AP).—Italian Communist and Socialist leaders today launched an offensive in the Constituent Assembly to unseat Premier Alcide de Gasperi's Christian Democrat government with charges that it was servile to the United States and used police measures against the opposition.

Communist Chief Palmiro Togliatti accused de Gasperi's interior minister of enforcing Fascist statutes in forbidding leftists to post manifestos depicting the government as "the protector of speculators." De Gasperi denied the accusation.

Socialist Leader Pietro Nenni declared that Communists and Socialists had been excluded from the cabinet formed last May "ostensibly because the United States wanted it that way."

Togliati's charge drew shouts from Chrsitian Democrats and right wingers of "Petkov, Petkov"—a reference to Nikola Petkov, Budgarian opposition leader hanged Tuesday in Sofia.

"If in 1921 we had put Mussolini to the wall," the Communist reported, "much would have been spared Italy. At any rate, it's a Bulgarian question. It doesn't interest me."

Menni and Togliatti were the first speakers in debate on three motions for a vote of no confidence in the de Gasperi government. Representative Richard M. Nixon (R., Calif.), member of a subcommittee investigating European economic conditions, and J. Wesley Jones, United States embassy first secretary, were among the hundreds of spectators.

Togliatti, wearing a dark-blue suit and a bright and a bright red tie, spoke for two hours. He admitted that a recent strike wave had a political tenor and said, "agitation will continue." He said one big cause of the labor unrest was that "the capitalists felt themselves strengthened by the exclusion of representatives of the workers from the government."

Nenni charged that "the phrase 'the United States wants it that way' is being used by Italian politicians to cover their own internal dirty politics."

He added: "The same parties who up to 1945 used to explain all their actions by saying, 'Churchill wants this' or 'Churchill wants that' today are declaring, 'This is the will of the United States.'"

The attack was challenged immediately by a government spokesman, Foreign Minister Carlo Sforza, who shorted, "If you can prove any instance, I will resign immediately."

De Gasperi, supported by his own Christian Democrats, who have 207 votes in the 556-member assembly, was expected to win a victory by the narrow margin of about 12 votes if various smaller moderate and rightest parties stick to him.

The Communists have 104 members in the assembly, the Nenni Socialists 64 and the Saragat Socialists 52.

Mrs. Roosevelt Admits Soviet Poses Problem

Lake Success, Sept. 26 (AP).—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt acknowledged today that the difficulties posed in dealing with Russian delegates to the United Nations Assembly appear most insuperable at times.

Russia's Andrei Y. Vinshinsky, in a news conference, meanwhile, commented sarcastically on her new appointment by Secretary of State Marshall to a position to answer Vishinsky's now renewed charges of warmongering among the personnel of the United States delegation and elsewhere in this country.

Vishinsky said that the American delegation is "getting ready another of the American delegation"—meaning Mrs. Roosevelt—to oppose him later on in the political committee discussion of his charges of warmongering.

"Well, we shall live and see," Vishinsky wryly told the correspendents gathered in the Security Council chamber.

"Try as you may," Mrs. Roosevelt told reporters at about the same time, "you cannot understand why they (the Russians) act as they do, even when you project yourself into the position their nation occupies."

She did not attend the Vishinsky conference.

When told later what Vishensky said, Mrs. Roosevelt declared: "I have not yet been told that I am wanted to speak. I was only asked to assist Mr. Austin on this resolution."

On the United States delegation's committee assignment sheet she is listed in "assistance to" Permanent United States Delegate Warren R. Austin in debate on the Soviet-sponsored question:

"Measures to be taken against propaganda and the inciters of a new war."

Ford Quits U. S. Air Policy Group

President Truman yesterday accepted the resignation of Henry Ford, 2d, as a member of the President's Air Policy Commission.

Ford wrote Mr. Truman that "it is now quite apparent that I can not . . . give the time and study necessary to arrive at an intelligent judgment on the many important problems you have assigned to the commission."

To replace Ford, the President named John A. McCome, president of the Bechtal-McCome Corp. McCome, whose home is in Los Angeles, has been a member of the staff of the Air Policy Commission since last August.

Fisher Suicide Spurs Audit Of Fourth Police Precinct

check of the books. He said Fisher owed about three months dues from the precinct, or about $480.

Capt. Clarence Lutz, president of the Police Relief Association, said he has asked for an accounting from Pvt. A. E. Corley at the Fourth Precinct who is the organization's regularly designated collector but who let Fisher do the collecting for him. He said one month's dues, about $168, was due from Fisher.

Benefits Paid Family

Fisher was a member of two of the three associations and upon his death his family received benefit payments of $200 from the Policemen's Association and $424 from the Metropolitan Police Retirement Association.

Captain Keuhling told a reporter of The Washington Post last week that an investigation of Fisher's records was being made but was not complete. He denied at that time any knowledge that there was a shortage or had been a shortage.

"We are making a thorough search of all Fisher's papers which we found in his desk," Captain Keuhling said last week.

Yesterday, when questioned by the same reporter, Captain Keuhling said "there is no shortage so far as I know."

Q.—Was there ever a shortage?

A.—I can't comment on that; I have reported to my superior officers.

Q.—Has there been any shortage disclosed in collections of policemen's funds?

A.—We are still making a check of those funds.

Reports Heavy Drinking

Capt. Keuhling said that Fisher had been "drinking heavily" in the past few months. He said he had been on the verge of calling him into his office to warn him about the drinking, but that he had hesitated because Fisher was "such a nice guy."

The "heavy drinking" was denied yesterday by Fisher's daughter, Mrs. Ethel McMullan. She said that her father always returned home immediately after his shift, drank only moderately and owed no bills.

Capt. Keuhling's two superior officers, Inspector Clarence Talley, who is in charge of the Second Police District which includes the Fourth Precinct, and Inspector Walter Thomas, acting police superintendent in the absence of Maj. Robert J. Barrett, were questioned by a reporter.

Knows of No Shortage

Inspector Talley was asked if he knew of any shortage in the accounts at the Fourth Precinct.

A. To my knowledge there is no shortage in any accounts.

Q. Do you know if there was ever a shortage?

A. No comment.

Q. Do you know whether the investigation at the Fourth Precinct is complete?

A. Yes, I believe it is complete, and there was no shortage shown. I believe in letting dead men lie in peace.

Inspector Thomas also was asked if he knew of any shortage in funds at the Fourth Precinct.

A. I have no official knowledge of any shortage.

Q. Do you know whether the investigation at the Fourth Precinct is complete?

A. There has been no official report submitted to me.

Natural Procedure

Q. Why is there an investigation at the Fourth Precinct?

A. It is a natural check because a bonded man (Fisher was bonded for $1000) committed suicide. Any business organization would make such a check under similar circumstances.

In ordering accountants to the Fourth Precinct station, at 4th and E sts. sw., District Auditor Pilkerton said that an audit this year of welfare funds showed a $45,000 loss over a period of years.

He said in view of the fact that his office had no way of keeping track of this money, he had recommended to the Commissioners that the practice of the precincts collecting welfare payments be abandoned and the money be paid directly to the Welfare Department.

brought home his wife Edna and daughter, who had been in North Carolina. Mrs. Clair's mother had been ill with heart trouble and they were visiting her.

The family had sandwiches and milk. The wife and child, Elizabeth Anan, 9, went to bed, Private Clair announced that he could not sleep, that he was going for a walk.

Sometime later, Mrs. Clair asked him to go to bed and reminded him that it was late. He walked into the bedroom and toward the dresser drawer where his revolver law. He then walked away from it.

The little girl said, "Daddy took his pistol."

The mother then started to follow him into the living room and as she walked she heard him utter the words about Fisher. Then she heard the shot.

The coroner's office ruled it suicide.

Fisher and Clair rode to work regularly in Fisher's car. On the morning that Fisher was found dead, Clair waited a half hour for him and at the stationhouse learned of the tragedy.

Clair asked to serve as pallbearer for Fisher and did so on Monday.

But Captain Kuehling, after disclosing that Fisher's accounts at the station were being audited, said:

"I give you my word of honor there is no connection between the two cases."

The death recalled the suicide on October 2, 1946, of Harley E. Metcalf, 48, veteran policeman of the Eighth Precinct, and an ordained minister. He was found dead in the gas-filled kitchen of his home, 4437 Alton pl. nw.

Funeral services for Private Clair will be held at 2:30 p. m. Tuesday in the Fort Myer Chapel with burial in Arlington Cemetery.

Clair has another daughter, Jean, 12. Other survivors include two brothers, Lloyd of Yreka, Calif., and Henry of the Washington address, and three sisters, Mrs. Margaret Pase of this city, Mrs. Rose Thomas of Baltimore, and Mrs. Opal Channels of Elkins, W. Va.

mate of probable damage from killing frosts in several of the corn States since that date.

Also influencing the upward movement of grain prices was the report that the Commodity Credit Corporation was back both in the cash wheat and the flour markets buying for export.

Corn moved up 2¼ to 2½ cents; oats up to 1 1/18 cents higher; soybeans jumped from 5 to 7 cents, and wheat from 4 to 6½ cents.

Lard followed the trend, moving up from 20 to 35 cents a hundredweight; butter went up 2 cents a pound; and cocoa hit an all-time high of 44 cents on the New York spot market.

Ringling Foreman Freed of Murder In Circus Slaying

Baltimore, Sept. 26 (AP).—Hubert Thompson, 44-year-old assistant foreman of the Ringling Brothers, Barnum and Bailey Circus, was found innocent in Criminal Court today on a murder charge growing out of the fatal shooting of a circus lot employe while the big show was here last spring.

Richard Sheehan, who worked for a circus contracting firm, was found not in a dressing tent July 12. Thompson was arrested by FBI agents in Hutchinson, Kans., August 8.

The state's case was based on written statements taken from circus employes shortly after the shooting. They are all with the circus in Texas now.

Thompson's attorney told the court his client shot Sheehan in self-defense after the man threatened him with an upraised chair. Assistant State's Attorney John C. Lewis said several witnesses' statements supported the self-defense contention.

...n Is Injured In Navy Powder ...nt Explosion

A small explosion at the Naval Powder Factory in Indian Head, Md., yesterday injured one man, but caused no property damage, according to a Navy spokesman here.

The injured person, Upton Josh, a mineman, who lives in Indian Head, was working with gunpowder in a laboratory shortly after 8 a. m., when the explosion occurred, the Navy said. Injuries to his hand and side were treated at the Powder Factory dispensary, after which he was taken to Providence Hospital.

Josh, a civilian, is employed by the Naval Ordnance Laboratory, but was doing some work at the powder factory.

Taft to Push Welfare Bill

from Government and State funds combined.

It was the progressive side of the complex personality that is Taft, speaking tonight. But few would have known it from the way he lashed out at the New Deal's early welfare experiments, and repudiated any thought of "...ocialization."

But here and there was a line like the following:

"A country as prosperous as the United States should be able to provide a free education for every child, health and hospital service for all those who cannot pay for it. Minimum decent shelter for every family unable to attain it, subsistence relief for those unable to obtain jobs.

"This is the ideal to which I would like to see the States and local communities attain."

Taft motored to Gearhart from Seattle, Wash., where he was picketed again by the extreme left-wing groups. His middle-of-the-road foreign policy speech there last night received only thin applause from the strictly non-partisan World Affairs Council.

In his speech here tonight, he said the New Deal "talked of social security" but never attained it. Instead of "running everything from Washington," he said the GOP social program must be run by States and local communities, with the Federal role secondary, and no aid rendered persons able to "pay fully" their own way.

Arabian Oil Pipe Approved

Arabian company plans to construct 1140 miles fo pipeline extending from Abqaiq in Saudi Arabia to the Mediterranean Sea near Sidon, in Lebanon.

300,000 Barrels a Day

The line is designed to transport 300,000 barrels of crude oil a day and "could, if necessary, be expanded to carry 400,000 barrels," the department said.

The department said the Trans-Arabian company's line is expected to be completed in 1949.

Steel requirements are 305,000 tons.

There was no immediate comment on the policy to be followed on further steel requirements for the project, but it was indicated strongly in official quarters that the three-month license covered only the first shipments of 20,000 tons and that the department expects to continue licensing further shipments of steel as needed until the line is completed.

Truman Opens Chest Drive

In this modern world of science and sociology human values are sometimes overlooked.

That we must avaid at all costs. Let us always remember that we are dealing with human beings. In our generous impulses we should follow the admonition set forth in St. Matthew's Gospel. Our Lord, bidding us to aid and comfort our stricken neighbor, whoever he may be, spoke words as true today as when he uttered them 1900 years ago: "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethern, ye have done it unto me."

The "red feather services" supported by our gifts to the Community Chest, benefit not one group of people—they benefit all of us. For the plain truth is that what is good for some people in a community is good for all. What harms some, harms all.

The ills of society spread like a contagion and no one is safe. But we may take hope in the fact that that good in society is also contagious. That is why the Community Chest volunteers are willing to work so hard.

These volunteers are businessmen, housewives, company officials, shop foremen and workers in our vast network of industries, professions and trades. They are responding to a call to b egood neighbors. I suspect that most of the unselfish, the truly noble actions of men and women are a response to an inner compulsion to be good neighbors.

So I salute proudly the volunteers of the Community Chests of America. And I urge you, their fellow citizens, to meet them half way. When one of them calls on you, pledge generously.

Your pledge to the Community Chest helps to solve the myriad of human problems which are the common lot of everybody. And when you give that pledge warmly and generously, everybody benefits.

School Budget Of Anne Arundel Totals $2,564,674

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 26 (AP).—The Anne Arundel County Board of Education today submitted a $2,564,674 budget for 1948 for consideration of the county commissioners.

Of the total, $1,373,951 is expected from the State and $1,143,223 from the county. The full budget is $1,558,665 over the cost of operating the schools this year.

Although the board set no school tax figure, on the basis of their request for county funds the school tax for 1948 wiuld go to $1.29 per $100 of assessable property, a 24 cent increase.

In submitting the budget, Dr. David S. Jenkins, county school superintendent said, "The increases which you will note have been caused by: the new teachers salary scale, the necessity for increasing janitors salaries; the increasingly higher cost of materials, books and supplies and the need to provide for amortizing the seven-year loan of $2,500,000."

Eddy Resigns As Assistant to State Secretary

The resignation of William A. Eddy, special assistant to the Secretary of State for research and intelligence, for "personal reasons" was announced yesterday by Acting Secretary Robert A. Lovett.

Lovett said W. Park Armstrong, jr., had been named acting special assistant effective October 1. Armstrong has been Eddy's deputy.

In accepting Eddy's resignation, Lovett wrote that "as much as I regret the loss to the department which your resignation entails, I recognize the validity of the personal reasons which led you to make this decision." Eddy's record was praised by Lovett as "splendid" and his work "invaluable."

Armstrong, 40, was employed by the State Department last year after three years in the Military Intelligence Section of the Army.

Auto Pioneer's Kin Indicted In Dope Case

New Haven, Conn., Sept. 26 (AP).—The daughter of a famous pioneer automobile manufacturer, her husband, a retired naval commander who served in two wars, and a private detective have been indicted here on charges respectively, of buying and selling narcotic drugs.

Mrs. Green

The two men were arraigned before Federal Judge Carroll Hincks in Federal Court here today on secret indictments voted earlier in the week.

Charged with illegally buying drugs were Comdr. and Mrs. Fitzhugh Green of New Canaan. She was identified by United States Attorney Adrian W. Maher as the daughter of the late William C. Durant, noted automobile manufacturer.

Green, himself a graduate of Annapolis, Polar explorer and author, served in both wars in the Intelligence Service. He leaned in court on a cane as result of a back injury sustained during the Battle of Guaralcanal.

Mrs. Green, now in a private hospital in Hartford, will be arraigned, said Maher, when her condition permits.

Although the specific sale involved in the indictment occurred on June 21, narcotic agents said the Greens had been buying drugs for several years and that the total involved in transactions probably totaled close to $75,000.

Green, who is 59, pleaded innocent and was released on $2500 bail pending a hearing on October 27. Standard works of reference list him as coauthor with Charles A. Lindbergh on the latter's book, "We," and also as having collaborated with Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd and others.

Arraigned with Green and pleading guilty to a charge of sale was Clemens Deisler, 59, of New York City, employed by a famous detective agency. Deisler pleaded guilty to transportation, sale and exchange of narcotics.

Green, a native of St. Joseph, Mo., was graduated from Annapolis in 1909. The present Mrs. Green is his second wife.

Besides his work in collaboration with Lindbergh and Byrd, Green wrote about 20 other books, starting in 1917 when he published "Arctic Duty." His books include Robert Bartlett, Martin Johnson and biographies of Admiral Peary, and Byrd.

$25,000,000 Md. Sales Tax Yield Foreseen

Baltimore, Sept. 26 (AP).—Maryland's 2 per cent sales tax will bring in at least 25 million dollars its first year, State Comptroller James J. Lacy predicted in a new estimate yesterday.

At the time the act was passed by the 1947 Legislature administration officials estimated its yield would be about 18 million dollars annually.

Lacy based his new estimate on collections turned in by retailers since the levy became effective on July 1. July returns amounted to $1,683,000, and those for August will approximate $1,800,000, the comptroller said.

He said the yield would probably increase "month by month."

Lacy said that to his knowledge the administration had not yet given consideration as to how any excess over 18 million dollars would be used.

Attorney Plans to Show How Md. Can Drop Tax

Baltimore, Sept. 26 (AP).—Attorney Hyman A. Pressman said today he would show the Maryland Legislative Council next week how the State's new sales tax can be eliminated without increasing property or individual income taxes.

Pressman will appear before the council next Wednesday. The attorney last month in Circuit Court lost an attempt to have the sales tax declared unconstitutional.

Forces Fund Cut Against Inflation Held 'Foolhardy'

Frank A. Hecht, president of the Navy League, said yesterday that any effort to relieve inflationary pressures by reducing military expenditures would be "foolhardy."

In an "open letter" to Marriner S. Eccles, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, Hecht said "the causes that underlie inflation are not solely those created by the expenses of our military services but are very largely, the results of mistaken efforts of the Government itself."

Eccles remarked in a speech Thursday that heavy outlays for the armed forces were among the important factors contributing to what he described as a danger of "unchecked inflation . . . ending in economic collapse."

Hecht said Eccles also was quoted as urging a reduction of defense expenditures to prevent such a catastrophe.

"I sincerely urge you to reconsider your approach," Hecht wrote. "A nation which is weak in the military sense is a direct invitation to . . . attack and conquest."

Hirshberg's Navy Conviction Is Set Aside

New York, Sept. 26 (AP).—Federal Judge Clarence G. Galston today set aside the Navy court martial conviction of Chief Signalman Harold C. Hirshberg of maltreating fellow war prisoners in a Japanese prison camp on the ground that the Navy lacked jurisdiction to try him.

Hirshberg

The judge cited the fact that Hirshberg was accused by the Navy after he had received an honorable discharge and reenlisted.

The Navy court sentenced Hirshberg to 10 months in prison and a dishoronarble discharge after his conviction.. Through his attorney, Hirshberg appealed to the Federal Court on a habeas corpus writ charging the Navy had no jurisdiction over him.

After a three-week trial last month, Hirshberg was convicted of striking Chief Carpenter's Mate George N. Gaboury, 36, of Webster, Mass., and Chief Boatswain's Mate Robert H. Welch, 26, of Tulsa, Okla., in a prison camp in the Philipines.

76 Prisoners Flee French Camp for Collaborationists

Paris, Sept. 26.—A mass jail break in which 76 French collaborationist convicts escaped last night from the Carrere Prison near Villeneuve-sur-Lot while 300 others were barely prevented from following them, has thrown all of southern France into a state of alert today.

Accomplices with waiting automobiles were reported to have whisked away most of the fleeing prisoners, presumably toward Spain.

The prison camp at Carrere is said to have about 1100 inmates, most of whom are serving up to 10-year sentences at hard labor for common law crimes but who had been released by the Vichy regime to fight as volunteers against Russia on the Eastern Front. Twelve of the fugitives were reported recaptured this morning, leaving 64 still at large. All the escaped men are in civilian clothes, because no uniforms are worn in the camp.

Truman's Ex-Manager Admits Parole Action

Chicago, Sept. 26 (U.P.).—Paul Dillon, prominent St. Louis attorney and friend of President Truman, testified today that he appeared before a Federal parole board on behalf of four Capone gangsters at the request of the late Edward Brady, a Missouri politician.

Dillon testified before a House subcommittee which is investigating the parole of four former lieutenants in "Scarface" Al Capone's crime syndicate. He said that while he was in Washington for the parole board appearance he was entertained at the White House by Mr. Truman.

Dillon was Mr. Truman's senatorial campaign manager in St. Louis in 1934.

Dillon said he appeared before a United States parole board to ask that the four gangsters be transferred from Atlanta to Leavenworth Penitentiary so they could be nearer their Chicago homes.

The former Capone hoodlums involved are Paul Ricca, Philip D'Andrea, Charles Gioe and Louis Campagna. They were convicted at New York in 1942 of having extorted $1,500,000 from the motion picture industry on threats of calling strikes and creating labor violence.

Expensively dressed and giving the appearance of well-to-do businessmen rather than gangsters, the four listened attentively as Dillon testified before the congressional committee.

Dillon denied that he appeared before the parole board at the request of an official of one of Chicago's largest banks.

Representative Clare Hoffman (R. Mich.) had introduced evidence showing the Dillon had interceded for the gangsters at the request of an official of the "Continental Bank in Chicago."

Under questioning by Hoffman, chairman of the subcommittee, Dillon denied that he ever had discussed the case of the four gangsters with the late President Roosevelt. But he acknowledged that he did help obtain a commutation of sentence from Roosevelt for Frank Boehm, vice president of the Union Electric Co. of St. Louis, who was convicted of perjury in connection with political expenditures.

Previously, Daniel Lyons, chairman of the United States Parole Board, testified he would act to revoke the paroles of the four gangsters if "evidence is uncovered that they have perpetrated a fraud on the parole board."

The men were paroled last month after having served only one third of their 10-year sentences. An investigation was started after they arrived in Chicago.

Air Force Pilots Debate Value Of 'Screwball' Kamikaze Plen

An Air Force officer's proposal that the United States prepare for one-way atomic bomb missions in the event of war has met with a mixed reception among Air Force pilots.

O'Donnell

Commenting on suggested new tactics advocated by Col. Dale O. Smith, Maj. Gen. Emmett O'Donnell, director of air information for the Air Force and wartime leader of B-29 missions on Tokyo, said:

"At the present time I don't think we'd ask our crews to become Kamikazes. What might happen in a third World War, I can't say. Things might be different.

"However, the idea of one-way combat suggested seems to be different than the Kamikaze principle. If in an actual situation there was a clear 50-50 chance of survival of the crew and the mission was vital, such tactics might well be acceptable."

Other air veterans took varying views.

One bombardier of the Fifteenth Air Force who was shot down and spent two years in a prison camp, declared that he believed Air Force crews would accept the idea of one-way air tactics if convinced of the necessity and believed they had a reasonable chance of survival.

A veteran of the Eighth Air Force, who flew many missions to drop OSS operatives in Europe, felt that only a few volunteers—"mostly screwballs"— would be found for such assignments.

Other air veterans insisted the proposal was the wrong approach to the problem. They suggested that the answer was to build more long-range bombers or perhaps evolve something like "an aerial lifeboat carried as a parasite" on the bomber making the one-way trip.

Colonel Smith, himself a veteran bomber group commander of the Eighth Air Force, advanced his "one-way combat" tactics in the current Air University Quarterly Review. The latter is published by the Air Forces at Maxwell Field, Ala., with the objective of stimulating "the best professional thought" on new concepts of air strategy and tactics.

An Air Force spokesman pointed out that while the Air University Quarterly Review is an official publication, the views expressed in articles are those of the author and are not official Department of Air Force views.

Smith, in his proposal, argued that the United States will not have enough long-range bombers to carry out two-way atom-bomb missions in force against the Eurasian continent from existing American bases in the event of war in the near future. By sending our B-29s on one-way missions, however, we might end the war in a week, he said. And if we don't, an enemy might destroy us the same way.

Group Urges United States Of Indonesia

Amsterdam, The Netherlands, Sept. 26 (AP).—A group of prominent Dutchmen and Indonesians appealed today to the Netherlands and Indonesia to cooperate in finding a solution to their problems without outside help.

The group included President Soekawati of the state of East Indonesia; Sultan Hamid II, president of West Borneo, and Dr. P. F. S. Otten, president of Philips Radio Works.

In a statement sent to members of the Dutch royal family and the Netherlands government and Parliament, the group recommended establishment of law and order in the East Indies to be followed by formation of a police force to take over the task of the Dutch army.

The group also recommended the holding of elections in all East Indies territories and the convening of a conference to consider ways of establishing a United States of Indonesia voluntarily tied politically with the Netherlands.

Ceylon Seen Getting Status of Dominion

Colombo, Ceylon, Sept. 26 (AP).—A new government for Ceylon was sworn in today with its chief task the negotiation of agreements with Britain that may lead to Dominion status for the 25,332 square mile island off the coast of India.

D. S. Senanayake, a leading exponent of Dominion status, was sworn in as Prime Minister, Foreign Minister and Defense Minister, along with 13 other ministers.

AFL Leaders Fear Split on Labor Law

By Dillard Stokes
Post Reporter

AFL leaders yesterday were trying to block a convention battle—and a threatened AFL split—with a Taft-Hartley Act compromise.

The plan would buy harmony at the cost of a solid AFL policy toward the new labor law, and leave each big AFL union to go its own way.

The Taft-Hartley Act says no union shall have standing before the National Labor Relations Board unless all its officers swear they are not Communists. NLRB Counsel Robert N. Denham ruled that AFL officers must take the oath, too, or all AFL unions will lose their standing, and all CIO officers must swear, to save the standing of CIO unions.

3400 Cases Pending

About 3400 cases pending in the NLRB are due to be dropped unless the unions involved comply with the law by October 31.

Some union leaders favor obeying the act. Others say the NLRB is now so hedged by conditions and delays that it is of no use to labor. They would boycott the NLRB, and comply with none of the Taft-Hartley Act.

Most of the AFL executive council were ready to take the oath, but they were stopped by John L. Lewis, the mine workers president. He refused. The council backed away from the issue and passed it on to the AFL convention which opens in San Francisco a week from Monday.

Daniel J. Tobin, head of the teamsters' union, filed his own oath and threatens to pull the teamsters out of the AFL, if he has to, to save their NLRB standing.

The compromise plan would head off the floor fight between these two points of view, by changing the AFL constitution.

The change would leave Lewis and those who agree with him their titles and positions, but would limit the status of "officer" of the AFL to a handful of positions, which are held by men willing to take the oath.

That would leave Tobin free to press teamster cases in the NLRB, and Lewis—whose union has barred Communists from membership for 20 years—free to refuse to swear, and to boycott the NLRB. Other unions, in like manner could do as they wished.

AFL President William Green was understood to favor the compromise plan. It became known yesterday that the executive council had drafted a recommendation to the convention, but Green would not say what it was.

Lewis Holds Key

The compromise proposal might not head off a floor battle. Lewis might suspect that it took more away from him than the technical status of "officer." He might feel that this is the year to challenge Green for the mastery of the AFL.

If Lewis should balk, it would take a battle to put the compromise across. When he took his stand, the AFL council held up a vote. The fact that the compromise was being talked showed plainly that the AFL leadership had misgivings about fighting a convention battle to force Lewis to take the oath.

Some CIO unions want to comply with the act and keep their NLRB standing. So that a policy fight is likely when the CIO convention meets in Boston October 13.

However, the bulk of the CIO leadership is against compliance, and the convention is expected to back them up.

Correction

Frank A. Birgfeld, chief clerk of the Treasury Department who is retiring after 55 years Federal service—48 in the Treasury Department, will be honored at a testimonial banquet Tuesday at 7 p. m. at the Mayflower Hotel. The Washington Post erroneously reported yesterday that the banquet would be Monday.

Electrical Union Turns Down Resolution as 'Red Baiting'

Boston, Sept. 26 (AP).—The United Electrical Radio and Machine Workers of America (CIO) today demanded that "Wall Street be driven out of Washington" as the union's twelfth annual national convention rejected attempts to include a denunciation of Communist totalitarianism in a resolution on foreign policy.

For the third day in a row the 1000-delegate convention shouted down an attempt by a faction led by James B. Carey, national secretary of the CIO, to have the convention take an "outright stand" on the Communist issue.

Cries of "Red baiting" greeted a drive by the Carey bloc to substitute the anti-Communism resolution for the one offered by the majority of the convention's resolution committee which mentioned no foreign country by name and centered on denouncing "big business" and "Wall Street."

The union—third largest in the CIO—finally adopted by a show of hands a report declaring:

"We know that the common people of the world wish to live in peace. We know there is no conflict in the interests of the common people wherever they may live."

Curran's Supporters Claim Vote Victory

New York, Sept. 26 (AP).—Supporters of President Joseph Curran in the sixth biennial convention of the National Maritime Union (CIO) said tonight unofficial returns showed they had won 11 of the 15 posts on the convention's resolutions committee.

The pro-Curran faction, which has termed its opponets Communist-controlled, lost predominance on the rules and credentials committees earlier in the convention.

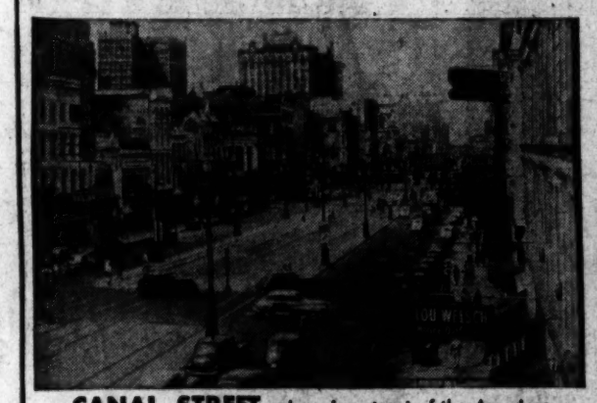
HURRICANE?

New Orleans Breezed Through It!

More people probably love New Orleans than any city in the world. So here are pictures to show our worried friends that reports of storm-damage were, fortunately, vastly overestimated.

TOP 4 PHOTOS WERE ALL TAKEN SEPT. 23RD—4 DAYS AFTER STORM

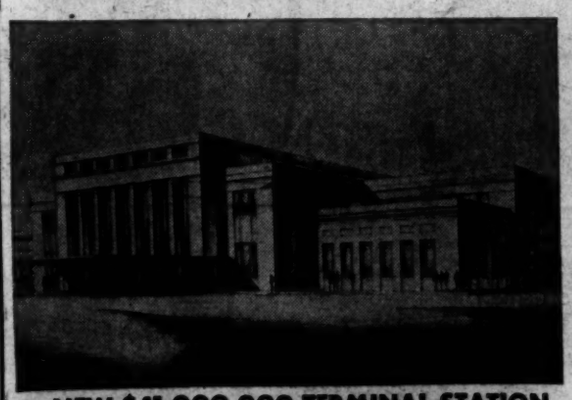


CANAL STREET—shopping street of the Americas—had a few signs down, some windows broken. Otherwise, no damage. Stores were busy as usual. (New Orleans does more business—wholesale and retail—than any city below the Mason-Dixon Line.)

THE FRENCH QUARTER, with its old-world charm, typifies the indomitable spirit of New Orleans. All the historic landmarks—the lacy balconies and secluded patios—still are here to delight our visitors. And of course, there's always magnificent food.

ALL PORT FACILITIES in "America's Second Port" are working as usual at top speed. And it takes "top speed" to handle the imports and exports traveling through New Orleans—natural gateway from the world's richest valley to the new markets of Latin America.

AMERICAN CAN COMPANY PLANT is operating on full schedule without absenteeism. It typifies the city's expanding industries which expand and profit because of New Orleans' unique natural resources, transportation facilities, and nearby markets.



NEW $41,000,000 TERMINAL STATION will soon be under construction. Actural ordinance authorizing terminal was introduced in the Commission Council on morning of hurricane! Rail, air, barge and steamship lines give manufacturers here unequaled freight service.

SULPHUR comes from one of the world's largest mines, near New Orleans. Other nearby resources—petroleum, salt, sugar cane, rice, cotton, sweet potatoes, furs, tung oil, lumber, livestock—all insure continuing prosperity for New Orleans!

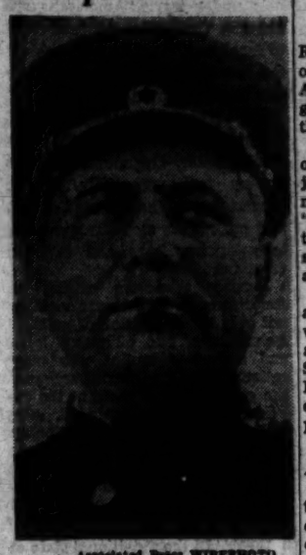
Reds Propose Korea Troop Withdrawal

Russian Proposes Troop Withdrawal



Associated Press WIREPHOTO
GEN. T. F. SHTIKOV, chief Russian delegate to the Soviet - American Commission which has tried unsuccessfully to set up a provisional government for a unified Korea, yesterday proposed that both American and Russian forces withdraw simultaneously at the beginning of 1948

Offer to Evacuate Simultaneously With Action by U. S.

Seoul, Korea, Sept. 26 (U.P.).—Russia today proposed simultaneous withdrawal of Soviet and American troops from Korea, beginning in 1948, as a solution to the Korean problem.

Col. Gen. Terenty Shtikov, chief of the Soviet delegation of the joint United States-Soviet Commission, said that the withdrawal "may give the Koreans an opportunity to form a government themselves, with the help and assistance of the Allies."

"If the American delegation agrees with the proposal regarding withdrawal of all foreign troops at the beginning of 1948, then Soviet troops will be ready to leave Koreo simultaneously with American troops," Shtikov said.

No American Comment

There was no comment from American officials here.

The Russian proposal climaxed two years of fruitless negotiations on the formation of a Korean government. The country is split in half, with the Russians controlling the industrial northern sector and the Americans the agricultural southern zone.

At the insistence of the United States, the Korean problem was placed on the United Nations General Assembly agenda on September 17 and the Russian invitation to withdraw all troops from Korea came as a complete surprise here.

The Moscow Council of Foreign Ministers in 1945 provided for an Allied trusteeship over Korea for five years after a government is established. Because of a deadlock on what parties would be included in the Korean provisional government, no progress has been made despite continued meetings between Russian and American officials.

The United States, for all practical purposes, abandoned efforts to reach an agreement with the Russians on August 29 when it proposed a big four conference to resolve the Korean problem. Russia rejected the suggestion.

In his opening speech to the U. N. Assembly Secretary of State George C. Marshall reviewed the stalemated negotiations and turned the problem over to the Assembly.

Observers believed that the two-year period of fruitless negotiations in Seoul had afforded the Russians sufficient time to whip their northern zone into the typical Soviet pattern. It was felt that the Russians could now safely leave the management of north Korea in the hands of its thoroughly Sovietized leaders.

Conservatives Plan Election Bid in Britain

By Homer Jenks

London, Sept. 26 (A.P.).—Conservative Party leaders, ignoring their twentieth defeat in by-elections in two years, announced today they will challenge the Labor government to an immediate new general election when they hold their party convention at Brighton next week.

The challenge will take the form of a resolution in behalf of the party's national executive demanding election of a new Parliament as a first condition of national recovery. The resolution will denounce the Labor government for "their improvident handling of our national resources."

Under British election practices, the next election would not be held until 1950, and the Labor government, swept into office with 393 seats in Commons against 198 for the Conservatives in the election of July, 1945, would hold power until then.

The Conservative challenge will be made despite the results of yesterday's by-election in the working-class West Islington district of London, in which a Labor candidate defeated a Conservative for the twentieth straight time since the Conservatives' general defeat. This situation is unprecedented in British politics.

A Conservative Party spokesman, however, said there was some comfort in the fact that yesterday's Labor candidate received only 56 per cent of the total vote compared to the Labor majority of 73 in the 1945 election.

Reds Assail South Africa On Accord

Lake Success, Sept. 26 (A.P.).—The Soviet Union assailed the Union of South Africa today for what it termed "flagrant disobedience" to the United Nations Assembly in refusing to submit a trusteeship agreement for the territory of southwest Africa.

South Africa was declared to be "undermining" the U. N.

Russia's charges opened the second day of debate in the Assembly's trusteeship committee on South Africa's announced decision against compliance with a recommendation last year by the U. N. Assembly that the League of Nations mandate soon be brought under the international trusteeship system.

A majority of the 55-nation trusteeship committee has criticized South Africa's non-compliance. South Africa has asked to be heard tomorrow.

Prof. Boris E. Stein of Russia asserted was South Africa's "real intention to annex the area. He said the Assembly "cannot by-pass this flagrant disobedience."

4 Britons Die In Holdup Laid To Stern Gang

Jerusalem, Sept. 26 (A.P.).—Between 20 and 30 young Jews, believed by officials to be members of the Stern gang, staged Palestine's most spectacular holdup today, killing four British policemen, wounding seven other persons in a Tel Aviv street battle and carrying off $180,000 loot in a white jeep.

Bags containing $420,000 of the total haul of $600,000 were dropped in the subsequent chase. Two of the gang were believed wounded, and two suspects seized.

The raid was carried off with military precision when the striking force of four youths in the white jeep drove up to Barclay's bank in Tel Aviv's busy Allenby road before noon, just as the money bags were being loaded into a guarded armored car.

The youths, said by eyewitnesses to have been Jews, surrounded the armored car, opened fire and mortally wounded one policeman, and struck in the face a bank official who was approaching with a money bag.

They then killed a British policeman in the armored car, seized the money bags in his custody and fled. Other policemen joined the battle, and in the exchange of fire two policemen were killed, another critically wounded, a Jewish constable slightly injured in the hand and five passersby wounded, two seriously.

Printers Offer to Accept Contract With Open Shop

The printers union yesterday offered to sign a contract with 23 Baltimore employers for a technically open shop.

Although it dropped the closed shop—which is against the Taft-Hartley law—the contract offer saved the printers "considerable freedom of action." Charles Brannock, president of Baltimore Typographical Local No. 12, said there was nothing in the contract offer to force the printers to work with nonunion members if they did not wish to.

Both the International Typographical Union and the Baltimore local have been accused by the Baltimore employer group—the Graphic Arts League—of violating the Taft-Hartley Act by refusal to bargain. The unions are due to answer the charge before a National Labor Relations Board examiner October 6.

Brannock said his local throughout the meetings with the employers was ready to sign a contract, when one was agreed on, and that the last meeting broke up at the request of the employer spokesmen. Instead of setting another meeting, Brannock said, the employers filed their charges.

When the Taft-Hartley Act outlawed its Nation-wide network of closed shops, the international printers union adopted a policy of not signing contracts. Instead, the printers proposed to post conditions of employment and to work for such employers as lived up to them.

Brannock said his local's first offer to the Graphic Arts League was a set of such conditions, but that he always was willing to sign any agreement that was reached. He said the new contract offer had been approved by the international union and was in keeping with its international policy.

Publishers, ITU Fail To Reach Agreement

Indianapolis, Sept. 26 (U.P.).—A conference between the American Newspaper Publishers Association and the International Typographical Union ended today with no agreement.

The ITU declined to back down from its "no contract" policy and turned down a proposal by the ANPA for a "conciliation contract" between the two groups.

President Woodruff Randolph of the ITU charged that the "failure of efforts" rested solely on what he termed the "lack of authority to negotiate with the union."

Chairman George N. Dale of the ANPA standing committee said "with deep regret" that the situation between the two groups "stands exactly as it did before we started the two-day conference."

Petkov Named As Conspirator In Indictment

Sofia, Bulgaria, Sept. 26 (A.P.).—The Bulgarian government has finally produced an indictment in the case of the "Military Union," 43 members of which were declared on February 14 to have been involved in an alleged plot to overthrow the Communist-headed regime.

The government charged that the executed peasant leader, Nikola Petkov, was implicated in the alleged conspiracy.

The indictment presented by Petko Petrinsky, Sofia prosecutor, named but 39 persons and accused Gen. Cyril Stanchev, former army corps commander at Plovdiv, and Col. Dimiter Stamboldjiev of "leading an organization with a Fascist ideology aiming at the overthrow of legally established authority by a coup d'etat."

The death sentence was demanded for both officers for violating "the law for the defense of the people's power."

The indictment also charged two lieutenant colonels, five majors, 20 captains and four lower officers with being members of the alleged conspiracy. Four officers and two enlisted men were accused of knowing of the plot but failing to report it.

(The execution of Petkov, former Agarian Party opposition leader who was hanged Tuesday on a charge of plotting to overthrow the government, has been denounced officially by both the United States and Britain as a travesty of justice.)

Other indictment charges were involved in the alleged conspiracy included two codefendents with Petkov, Col. Marko Ivanov, sentenced to 15 years, and Col. Boris Gerov, sentenced to 10 years.

Sofia newspapers published dispatches from Plovdiv giving more details of an incident in which a group of armed Bulgarian oppositionists, alleged to have entered Bulgaria from Greece, was reported annihilated September 7.

Czech Official Shuns Aid Plan But Asks Loan

Prague, Sept. 28 (U.P.).—Vladimir Clementis, Communist deputy foreign minister, said tonight that recent developments proved that Czechoslovakia was right in refusing to join in the Marshall Plan but in the same speech appealed for a 350-million-dollar loan from the World Bank.

Speaking at Hradec Kralove in a ceremony granting him freedom of the city, he:

1. Asserted that the western powers' policy of rebuilding German industry was a serious danger to Czechoslovakia and one of the chief causes of international tension.
2. Appealed for consideration for a World Bank loan.
3. Said Czechoslovakia wanted to intensify her economic and cultural relations with the West.
4. Demanded the retention of the veto in the United Nations and criticized Anglo-American attempts to transfer debates to the General Assembly "so as to outvote the Soviets."
5. Appealed for faith in the United Nations and attacked efforts to by-pass it.
6. Appealed for a return to international discussions of the "creative spirit of the Roosevelt-Stalin negotiations at Yalta."

Bishop Calls For Planned Social Order

Springfield, Mass., Sept 26 (A.P.).—Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam tonight called on fellow Methodist leaders to join with all Christians in planning a new social order of "economic justice, and racial brotherhood."

The head of the New York area of the Methodist church told 500 delegates to the first postwar world Methodist conference that "Christians have been catapulted into an era of change."

The issue is no longer change or continuity, he said, but the nature of change.

"Is it to be the change of consent or the change of coercion?" he asked. "The former involves democracy, the latter distatorship."

Creating Unrest

There is something ironic and ominous about the reminder issued to District citizens' and civic organizations by the superintendent of recreation, Milo F. Christiansen, as a result of the ugly Dahlgren Terrace meeting of last week. Dr. Christiansen calls attention to Section 1 of the Recreation Board's rules and regulations governing community use of school buildings and grounds. "Such facilities," Section 1 declares, "shall not be used for sectarian purposes, for activities tending to create unrest and acrimonious discussions in the community or for teachings contrary to our American institutions."

The Recreation Board has employed its authority in the past not to prevent the sort of stimulation of racial antagonism which occurred at the Dahlgren Terrace meeting but rather to prevent any intercourse between the races. It has forbidden the use of school facilities outside of school hours by mixed white and Negro audiences. The doctrine it now advances is a high-handed and extremely dangerous one. If it can be used to ban meetings like that of the Dahlgren Terrace Citizens Association, it can be used to ban all controversy.

The Recreation Board has revealed too little understanding of the character of American institutions to be entrusted with plenary power to define "unrest" or "American institutions." Schools are places where ideas should be aired—even unpopular ideas—so long as they do not create an actual danger of disorder or criminality. That is how the democratic process operates.

They Vote For Security

There is nothing mysterious about the consistent support that is being given to the United States' efforts to utilize the machinery of the United Nations for the peaceful settlement of the conflict between Greece and her Communist-dominated neighbors. The great majority of the U. N. representatives, both in the Security Council and the General Assembly, recognize the efforts of our Government for what they really are—efforts to arrest aggression, uphold the rights of peoples and restore peace where it no longer exists. In short, the U. N. delegates that are not dominated by Moscow are acting almost as a unit to implement the principles of that organization in spite of Russian obstruction.

The latest evidence of this tendency of the rank and file of free governments to support the American position came in the vote in the Assembly's Political and Security Committee on Thursday. The question was whether the committees should ask Albania and Bulgaria to agree to carry out the rules and principles of the United Nations Charter before inviting them to take part in the discussion of the Balkan question. The resolution was not in the form originally requested by the United States spokesman, Herschel V. Johnson, but it had his and Secretary Marshall's approval. The Russians were in vigorous opposition, but the vote was 38 to 6.

We should not be surprised if the stiff United States resolution on the Balkans problem were accepted by a similar margin; for it is merely an attempt to make the U. N. function as it was intended by its founders to function in the interests of peace and security. "The inability of the Security Council to take effective action in this case," as Mr. Johnson said, "passes a grave responsibility to the General Assembly to uphold the Charter and carry out the fundamental purposes of the United Nations." The resolution would support the findings of the commission of investigation set up by the Security Council. It would call upon Albania, Yugoslavia and Bulgaria to "cease and desist from rendering any further assistance or support in any form to the guerillas fighting against the Greek government." It would urge the same governments to settle their differences with Greece by peaceful means, to establish normal diplomatic relations, and arrange for the repatriation of refugees. To make these proposals effective a special committee would be set up "to observe compliance by the four governments concerned," to assist them in carrying out the Assembly's recommendations, and, if necessary, to the maintenance of international peace, to recommend a special session of the Assembly.

Every step proposed is in harmony with the letter and spirit of the Charter. The objective is clearly that of securing the peace that the peoples of the world so ardently desire. No pressure is needed to win support for this sort of policy. U. N. representatives are not being asked to support the United States against Russia; they are being asked to support the United Nations as an effective peace agency as against abandonment of collective security in the face of aggression. In the world of 1947 only one answer to that proposition is admissible for a free people.

Taft's Perspective

Senator Taft's indictment of the Democratic Party's conduct of our foreign policy must have prepared his listeners for a revolutionary alternative. But the Ohioan's seven-point program is hardly at variance with the Administration's own prescriptions. The difference is one of perspective. Between the lines one senses that Senator Taft would be indifferent to the kind of government that other countries want to establish. In other words, he would not worry if France or Italy, the countries most in danger of an overturn, were to set up a Communist regime.

However, such a change in the countries abutting on the Atlantic Ocean would clearly augment the world power of the Soviet Union and, in our view, put the United States, in consequence, under the shadow of certain war. In other words, it would threaten the "freedom of the people of the United States," the preservation of which the Senator puts at the head of the list in his seven-point program. For we would have to militarize this country thoroughly, and that means loss of freedom. This is the logic of Mr. Taft's own position. If we take it for granted, as Senator Taft seems to do, that we live under threat of Communist aggression everywhere, obviously any new positions that the Soviet Union were to grab would be merely new points of departure for more aggression. France or Italy, if the map means anything, would be advance positions for a world conqueror. Soviet gain of one or other country would at one stroke Russify the Mediterranean, make our policy in Greece untenable, cut off the Middle East, and provide springboards for infiltration on this Continent.

Even in less tempestuous days our traditional policy since Jefferson's time has been in self-defense to oppose the setting up of a tyranny over all Europe. But we left it to Britain to prevent such a happening. We have no buffer left today—no mighty Britain, no time to get ready. The responsibilities of prevention are cast up on our shores. One forehanded way of meeting the threat is to aid western Europe. There is nothing in the Taft speech, to be sure, to rule out a Marshall Plan for Europe, but he would limit aid to "specific countries for specific purposes." Surely our main purpose is to build up western Europe's strength, and in its present precarious situation, with the markets and sources of supply in eastern Europe cut off, this must be to encourage integration, if not unity—that unity which is strength. Senator Taft lacks the vision of the wide survey and forward view required by a Nation situated on the world's summit and, in consequence, the object of Soviet envy and cupidity.

It was lack of this global view, which today calls for the pursuit of a balance of power against the encroaching Soviet, that is responsible for much of our present plight. Senator Taft criticizes our peace policy. He is on sure ground. At Yalta, where our myopia was most manifest, a sick man was conducting our foreign policy. His illness, aside from anything else, led us into the peace of little preparation. But it is unfair to castigate President Truman for such a deficiency. No man entered the White House with less briefing of what was happening than Mr. Truman. Before he had had time to adjust himself, he had to go to Potsdam, and, in deference to Roosevelt-Morgenthau ideas, underwrote a scheme for a peace settlement which times have shown to have been plain lunacy. However, in this and other respects, President Truman has absorbed the lessons of experience. Our present policy in Germany is an example of a much more realistic approach to the problems of peace.

Our present foreign policy, in our opinion, is aimed at winning a peace that we have only half lost as the result of postwar shortcomings. It is defeatist to say, as Senator Taft—like the ancient mariner—does, that we have lost it, and few Americans will accept such an un-American verdict. Where there is pulsing life and massive power and enough brains, there is hope of retrieval—and by means of most of Senator Taft's own recommendations. These, as we say, do not provide any sharp alternative to the course on which we are already embarked. The details are much the same. The difference is that Senator Taft is still either too squint-eyed or too partisan to see our world problem in the large.

Mrs. Roosevelt's Role

The correspondence between Mrs. Roosevelt and Mr. Sumner Welles, made public Wednesday at the hearing before the House of Representatives' Committee on Un-American Activities, by no means proves that the former First Lady was a complaisant tool of the Communists, much as her late husband's political enemies might like to believe that she was. It is, nevertheless, another example of how easily her desire to help everyone and everybody exceeded her sense of propriety.

When Mrs. Roosevelt said that she did not even remember writing the letters to Mr. Welles in behalf of Hanns Eisler, the musician suspected by the State Department of having Communist affiliations, she was probably speaking the whole truth. She had merely taken at face value the assurances given her that Eisler was another deserving person in distress. There is not any doubt that she would have done the same for any other person whose plight had been similarly represented to her. After all she seems to have been only one of many important persons who interceded for Eisler. Another was Miss Dorothy Thompson, whose influence on opinion at that time was hardly less than Mrs. Roosevelt's.

Had Mrs. Roosevelt been content to exercise her generous instinct and ready sympathies in purely private benefactions they would have brought her and her husband nothing but credit. What made them dangerous of course was her disposition to meddle in matters of state and to deal directly with high officials in behalf of any person or cause that had enlisted her sympathy. Her readiness and even eagerness to meddle was naturally exploited, and it must be admitted that Mrs. Roosevelt was highly susceptible to the pseudo-humanitarian rhetoric in which Communists and Communist sympathizers were fond of cloaking their real purposes. Because she had herself been the object of much calumny, it was difficult to persuade her that anything said against one of her proteges was not also calumny.

To say that department officials need have paid no more attention to Mrs. Roosevelt's recommendations than to those of any other citizen is of course to give them credit for a kind of courage that not many possess. To say that the President's wife should have no official influence because she has no official status is to ignore a reality. It seems pretty safe to say that hereafter no President's wife will be content to confine her activities in the White House to family matters, formal hospitality and private charities. The current disposition of Mrs. Taft to conduct her husband's campaign is an index to the tendency.

In future, then, it appears that the voters must decide upon the qualifications not only of a candidate but of the candidate's wife. If this is the case, then the office of President's wife should be given a constitutional responsibility commensurate with its importance and power.

Lords Of The Atom

The ways in which atomic energy is to be directed and exploited are to be determined not by the Atomic Energy Commission but by the Congress—which is to say, ultimately, by the people of the United States. The Atomic Energy Act explicitly provides that "whenever in its opinion any industrial, commercial, or other nonmilitary use of fissionable material or atomic energy has been sufficiently developed to be of practical value, the commission shall prepare a report to the President . . ." The commission may appraise the significance and effect of the development and may make recommendations. But then the President must submit the commission's report and recommendations to Congress, and no action may be taken unless Congress concurs.

The chairman of the AEC, David Lilienthal, no doubt had this provision of the law in mind when he told the citizens of Crawfordsville, Ind., the other night "Atomic energy is your business." Indeed it is. It is far too important—if we may paraphrase Clemenceau on war—to be left to scientists, or even to statesmen. "Atomic energy," Mr. Lilienthal observed, "is not just another new gadget, nor just a new weapon, however powerful and devastating. We are dealing with forces as fundamental to your life as the force of the sun, the forces of gravity, the forces of magnetism."

Atomic energy has been presented to the people, however, not only as a mystery but as a dread and dangerous and altogether destructive mystery at that. Mr. Lilienthal wants this fallacy dispelled. He has an illuminating analogy to set the situation in perspective. "The primitive man who first beheld fire," he told his listeners, "was probably terrified by this strange and destructive force he knew so little about. He could not predict that fire would change the life of every mortal from that early day to this, nor could he possibly know that the force that he saw lay waste to the forest and consume his enemies would someday be accepted as one of the most friendly and helpful forces at man's command."

Atomic science can make rich contributions to peace and decency and human freedom. But the condition of its development along such lines, the AEC chairman warns, is that "you must not at your peril let these new technical advances get out of your power to control and direct. I warn you that this must not happen or the essence of the American scheme of things will be lost." And what is needed to make effective this sort of popular control is not scientific or engineering knowledge but a "sense about human relations, about standards of fairness, about principles of self-government and self-education. These judgments turn on the weight to be given to concern for the individual as compared to concern for the state."

This is healthy and heartening talk from a man whose role as the manager of a mystery might have led him to employ it as a source of power. There are men in Congress so obsessed with the military aspects of atomic energy as to be heedless of its prodigious beneficent potentialities—so concerned with the preservation of secrecy and security as to be heedless of the impact upon liberty. Mr. Lilienthal sounded a frank warning about such zealots, applicable in particular, although he did not mention them by name, to some members of the House Committee on Un-American Activities who have been trying to raise doubts concerning the loyalty of physicists who were leaders in the development of atomic energy. "Nothing could weaken the security of our country in the atomic field more quickly," he cautioned "nor more surely slow up research in cancer control, say, than to permit science and scientists to be kicked around by the organized forces of ignorance and demagoguery and petty politics."

Austrian Education

The interesting article, "Austrian Education," by Professor Engel-Janosi in The Washington Post of September 19, requires some additional remarks which may also supplement Mr. Fred M. Hechinger's article in The Washington Post of September 7. A former Aulic Councilor of the Austrian Federal Ministry of Education for two decades and one of the coworkers in the making of the famed Austrian School reform, may I be permitted to refer to my publication Secondary Education in Austria 1918-1938?

Truly democratic principles and a high standard were the basis of Austrian education in these years, although somewhat diluted in the "authoritarian" era. It was the main achievement of the Austrian school reform that it practically established the Einheitsschule (an eighth grade school common to all) and threw open the doors of secondary and university education to everyone. (It should be added that there were never "only a few insignificant scholarship cases", as Mr. Hechinger asserts; tuition had always been free for all in elementary schools and free for the poorer students in secondary schools.)

Thus Austria in the period between the wars had just the opposite of what Mr. Hechinger calls "a stratified system of education" and its very principle was not at all "opposed to the fundamental premise of democracy".

Since the war the progressive trend in education is prevalent again, which is indicated by the fact that two prominent Austrian educators, both active in the Austrian school reform work, Carl Furtmuller and Hans Fischl, who during the war served in the U. S. with the U. S. Government, are back again in leading positions in the Austrian school administration. There are also a number of ardent anti-Nazi educators who had to retire under the Nazi regime reactivated now. The Austrian libraries are struggling to fill gaps and to catch up again with recent developments.

It may be hoped that Austria, when an independent and sovereign state again, will play, as before, her traditional role as a bridge between Western and Eastern civilization.

Army Recruiting

The failure of voluntary recruiting has been emphasized as one of the direst reasons for compulsory military training. However, before we write off voluntary recruitment, would it not be wise to try and find the reason for its failure? And is it not significant that while recruiting of enlisted men has fallen well below par, selective boards have had to be set up to weed out the officers that the Army wishes to keep from the many who have applied? We now have the situation of not enough enlisted men and too many officers. Why is this so?

An examination of the reasons men give for not entering or reentering the Army as enlisted men should be enlightening. There were over 12 million men in the Army of which about 1,200,000 were officers. Admittedly officers are paid more, as they should be, because they occupy positions of greater responsibility. Higher pay for officers, however, played no part in the reasons given for not enlisting or reenlisting. The main reason men gave for not enlisting is the class system maintained between officers and enlisted men.

The Army has not stood entirely still, however, in their methods of recruiting. Many of the faults have been eliminated but the main difficulty here is that the changes in policy have not received sufficient publicity and are still unknown to the majority of our people. One of the greatest improvements has been allowing the potential enlistee to choose the Army school he wishes to attend and then not enlisting him until there is an opening for him at that school. Too often in the past men have been told they would be sent to a certain school only to find after enlistment that there were no openings.

Penguin's Advice

The friends of a sales tax for the District have seemingly forgotten how irrevocably they were once betrayed by Anatole France.

Let us recall a few lines from their spokesman on Penguin Island. Said Morio, one of the wealthiest of the Penguins;

"The poor live on the wealth of the rich, and that is the reason why that wealth is sacred. Do not touch it; to do so would be an uncalled-for evil. You will get no great profit by taking from the rich, for they are very few in number; on the contrary you will strip yourself of all our resources and plunge the country into misery. Whereas, if you ask a little from each inhabitant without regard to his wealth, you will collect enough for the public necessities and you will have no need to inquire into each citizen's resources, a thing which would be regarded by all as a most vexatious measure. By taxing all equally and easily, you will spare the poor, for you will leave them the wealth of the rich . . . What is certain is that everyone eats and drinks. Tax people according to what they consume."

Plan For Aid

The papers are full of the European problem. May I suggest a way for actual help? A similar plan has been worked out very successfully in Switzerland. A number of cities, towns, even small villages in this country could be sponsors to certain cities, towns and villages in Europe. Also public and private schools could sponsor certain schools in Europe. In other words, as the Swiss say, they can become "godmothers" of these towns or schools.

Perhaps some American women's clubs would find interest and time for this work also. Food and clothing is actually collected and sent to a needy town or community. In this way a real contact, a personal interest, so to speak, is established through competition between the cities or schools here, more is collected, and the very important factor, a closer relationship with people in Europe is established.

Born in this country, I have lived in Europe since 1919, returning to this country in 1946 with my family. We are still thrilled, awed and so thankful for the many advantages in this country. But we want to ask all the American children to please think of the children of the Old World. We want to ask the parents, please don't just write and read articles about "help to Europe," please get together and really help.

"Little Black Sambo"

To hold up a picture of "Little Black Sambo" is certainly a disgusting way of beginning the educational experience of a class of 6-year-olds, reported by Elsie Carper in The Washington Post of September 23 at the Park View School.

The teacher, Mrs. Osceola C. Joiner, starts her first graders out by holding up a picture that is the same thing as holding up a race to ridicule.

No wonder educational institutions are such rank failures at teaching children to respect others.

"Justified" Wage Increases

A good many of us Americans have said that our press and its traditions insure us of pretty thorough discussion of issues. A good many of us readers of The Washington Post have said it is an exceptional paper. And so I call your attention to something which has puzzled me in discussions—in your paper as well as elsewhere—of industrial wage increases. It is a matter brought again to mind by a cryptic remark in your editorial of September 21, "Mr. Taft's Program." Among other thing you say: "Unfortunately, the problem that now confronts us is how to check the rapid rise in living costs that leads to justified demands for wage increases." It is not clear to what type of increases you refer, but many will think that you have reference to further industrial wage increases, now being discussed.

"Justified demands for wage increases" has a compelling sound. And there is a sense in which all persons are entitled to better living conditions—injustice here is deplored in much the same mood that one deplores human mortality. But I assume that you are concerned with actual problems, where decisions result in real—all too real—results. And so I venture to state my understanding that where there is in the market a limited amount of goods, the economic group which has received income increases percentage-wise greater than the rise in the cost of living are taking from the groups which have received increases less than the cost-of-living rise some of the goods the latter could reasonably have expected to receive.

"Justified demands for wage increases." Justified by what? True, certain demands are plainly justified—for example, the demands of teachers, whose incomes have shockingly failed to keep step with the cost of living. And there may be reasons for deliberately giving to a specified group a bigger percentage of our total goods than they have been receiving. But rarely, it seems to me, is the question of justification in union wage demands given perspective by reference to the relative factors I have suggested.

Statistics available to me indicate that since 1939 the average industrial worker's wage has advanced markedly more than the cost of living. I understand this to mean that he is markedly better off than he was eight years ago. By the same token—even because he is better off—school teachers, life insurance annuitants, pensioners, Government employes, yes, and landlords, too, as well as other relatively impotent political groups, are in worse positions than in 1939.

Let us look again at the case of the industrial worker who has already received a greater percentage increase in income since 1939 than the percentage increase in the cost of living. Is his further encroachment upon other economic groups through another wage increase "justified"? If so, upon what grounds? Would unorganized groups favor new wage increases for striking industrial workers if shown that they would pay the increases?

Just how adequate is a discussion of a wage increase in terms merely of the fact that the cost of living has increased—or even that it has increased by a specified per cent?

"Overfed" Americans

By Malvina Lindsay

Too Much Or Too Little

AS WINTER approaches in a hungry world the old passionate and hackneyed debate over food gets under way. "Americans are starving themselves to send food to foreigners" . . . "Americans eat too much—they are digging their graves with their teeth."

The proposed sacrifice food program is likely to make the argument shriller. Opponents of aid to hungry and potentially chaotic countries may be counted on to pull out all the stops in appealing to primitive fears and stomach emotions.

Leaders who are calling on Americans to eat less are meeting not only the opposition of political isolationists, but of many labor and consumer groups who want rationing by Government action so the greedy cannot profit at the expense of the public-spirited. Also the newer, shrewder isolationists have abandoned the Santa Claus cliche to warn that we must be dead sure we have enough for ourselves before we help others.

WHAT IS the nutritional state of Americans? Are they overfed? Will they become gaunt and anemic if they share their rations? Will they get fatter, softer, gout-stricken if they don't?

Americans have greatly improved their eating habits and health in the last 35 years, studies of the United States Bureau of Home Economics show. Their nutrition is now the best in their history, owing to education and to wider distribution of income. The once underfed third of the Nation has been eating better because it has had more jobs and paychecks—though inflation prices are now lightening its wartime dinner pail, curtailing its children's milk.

Overfed Americans are in the main those who eat too much fats, starches and sweets. They extend through all classes, are found especially among the idle and inactive. Temptations of cornucopian buffets and cocktail hors d'oeuvre platters cause them to fight losing battles with their waistlines. Big company and family dinners in the pioneer tradition, a surfeit of club banquets and social luncheons and teas contribute to the swollen ranks of the overfed.

On the other hand, many low-income families are not able to afford the basic foods they need. And nutritional and culinary ignorance still impair diet among all classes.

Two most frequent danger points in American diets, according to Government food economists, are lack of riboflavin and calcium. Milk is one of the most important sources of both. Riboflavin is also provided by liver, kidney, cheese, eggs, some greens as kale fish, poultry, dry beans and peas peanuts, whole grain breads.

THE PROPOSED food sacrifice program might improve the American diet in these needed elements, since it would put more emphasis on whole grains, cheaper cuts of meat, including the nutritive meat organs, on dairy and poultry products, vegetables and fruit.

Dr. Henry S. Sherman, noted authority on nutrition, recently urged that fruits, vegetables and milk get a higher proportion of the American food buget. This he said would insure better health, also cause people to eat less meat, fat and sugar, of which much of the world is in short supply. High-income families, he said, should stop using so much high-priced beef and other meats that require that animals be high grain-fed. Thus there would be more grain for shipment abroad and more grain to feed dairy cattle and increase milk production.

National committees are now studying American resources to find how far this country can go to set Europe on its feet. Unlike so much of the world, which has suffered from drought, storms, floods, the United States has had a long cycle of good crops. One food, sugar, has become so abundant that beet sugar manufacturers are reported planing a campaign to make America's sweet tooth sweeter. Foods not so abundant could be stretched by economy and ingenuity, aided by intelligent and restrained eating.

A great voluntary sharing of food is possible and practical without any Americans going hungry, and with overfed Americans achieving better diets and health. Though many food experts are skeptical of such a program accomplishing much materially, and those demanding Government controls look on it as a Don Quixote gesture, yet if done wholeheartedly, it would have a strong effect psychologically, both here and abroad. It would expand the spirits of those participating, so demonstrate to the world the American generosity had not bogged down in shrewd caution and primitive bone hiding.

Argentine Beef

It seems to me that the present prices of meat and meat products warrant a reconsideration of the hoof-and-mouth disease which up to now has precluded the import of Argentine beef into this country. Perhaps there are some of us who would not be as susceptible to these "diseases" as the packers and packers of the country.

Some of the things for which the last war was fought were concerned with free trade. Let's have it then, and see if our meat producers can hold their own in a competitive market.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Cold War XII

IN THE FIRST article of this series, I said that Mr. X's article on "The Sources of Soviet Conduct" was "a document of primary importance on the sources of American foreign policy" in that it disclosed to the world the estimates, the conclusions on which is based that part of American foreign policy which is known as the Truman Doctrine. Fortunately, it seems to me, the Truman Doctrine does not have a monopoly. Though it is a powerful contender for the control of our foreign policy, there are at least two serious competitors in the field. The one we may call the Marshall line, and the other is the American commitment to support the United Nations.

Lippmann

The contest between the Truman Doctrine on the one hand, the Marshall line and the support of U. N. on the other, is the central drama within the State Department, within the Administration, within the Government as a whole. The outcome is still undecided.

THE REAL issue is hidden because the Truman Doctrine was promulgated shortly after General Marshall became Secretary of State, and because he made the decision to go to the support of Greece and Turkey, which was a concrete application of the Truman Doctrine. The issue is confused by the fact that Mr. Molotov and the Soviet propaganda abroad and many publicists here at home are representing the Marshall proposals to Europe as an application of the Truman Doctrine. The confusion is compounded still more because the Director of Secretary Marshall's Planning Staff is now known, through the publication of Mr. X's article, to have been the leading expert upon whose observations, predictions, and hypotheses the Truman Doctrine is based.

NEVERTHELESS, if we look at the two main theaters of American diplomatic interest—at China and at Europe—and if we fix our attention on Secretary Marshall's approach, we can see a line of policy developing which is altogether different from the line of the Truman Doctrine. General Marshall's report on China, which has now been reviewed and confirmed by General Wedemeyer, made it quite clear that in his judgment we could not, and should not, attempt the kind of intervention in China which we are carrying on in Greece. The Marshall and Wedemeyer reports do not argue that we can contain the Soviet Union and erect unassailable barriers in its path by participating in the Chinese civil war, as we are in the Greek civil war, and by underwriting Chiang-Kai Shek's government as we are underwriting the Athens government. The Marshall line in China is not an application of the Truman Doctrine, but of an older American doctrine that we must not become entangled all over the world in disputes that we alone cannot settle.

Yet the Marshall line in China is not isolationist. It would not end in our ceasing to interest ourselves in China and in giving Russia a free hand. But it is emphatically not the line of the Truman Doctrine which would involve us as partisans in the Chinese conflict and as patrons of one faction.

The line of the Marshall policy in China is to disentangle the United States, to reduce, not to extend our commitments in Asia, to give up the attempt to control events which we do not have the power, the influence, the means, and the knowledge, to control.

THE PROPOSAL which Secretary Marshall addressed to Europe in his Harvard speech last June was animated by the same fundamental conception—as China's problem has to be dealt with primarily by the Chinese, so European problems have to be dealt with primarily by Europeans. Thus there was no "Marshall Plan" for Europe: the essence of his proposal was that only a European plan for Europe could save Europe, or provide a basis on which the American people could prudently and fairly be asked to help Europe save itself. The Marshall proposal was not, as Mr. Molotov and many Americans who do not understand it have tried to make out, an extension to Europe as a whole of the experiment in Greece. Quite the contrary. In Greece we made an American plan, appropriated the money, entered Greece, and are now trying to induce the Greek government to carry out our plan. In the Harvard speech Secretary Marshall reversed this procedure. He told the European governments to plan their own rehabilitation, and that then he would go to Congress for funds, and that then the European governments would have to carry out their plans as best they could with the funds he could persuade Congress to appropriate.

The difference is fundamental. The Truman Doctrine treats those who are supposed to benefit by it as dependencies of the United States, as instruments of the American policy for "containing" Russia. The Marshall speech at Harvard treats the European governments as independent powers, whom we must help but cannot presume to govern, or to use as instruments of an American policy.

THE HARVARD speech was delivered about three months after President Truman's message. Much had happened in those three months, and all of it had gone to show that while Congress and the people were willing to applaud the Truman Doctrine, because they are exasperated with Russia, they were not going to support it with the funds and blanket authority which it requires. Though the President got the funds he asked for in order to apply his doctrine in Greece and Turkey, he got them after a long delay and in circumstances which were tantamount to telling him not to come back too soon for much more. The plans, which existed, for extending the Truman Doctrine to Korea and then to a series of impoverished, disordered and threatened countries on the perimeter of the Soviet Union, were discreetly shelved.

Yet a crisis, enormously greater than that in Greece or Korea or Iran or Turkey, was developing. It was a crisis of the British Empire, and of France, and of Italy, and indeed of the whole western world. Extraordinary measures of American assistance were obviously going to be needed. After Congress had showed its attitude last spring, there was no possibility that this assistance would be provided by applying the principles, the procedure, and the precedent of the Truman Doctrine, as it had been revealed in the Greek affair. A wholly different conception and a radically different approach were necessary if the crisis of the western world was to be dealt with.

OUT OF THE knowledge that the Truman Doctrine was unworkable in Europe, that Congress would not support it anyway, and that a constructive revival of European collaboration was imperatively necessary, the policy of the Harvard speech was conceived. And I think it is true to say that those who conceived it were concerned not only to devise a way by which Europe could be saved from economic disaster, but also to devise a graceful way of saving the United States from the destructive and exhausting entanglements of the Truman Doctrine.

They may not succeed. If the planning of policy in the Truman Administration Department were to be dominated by the conclusions propounded by Mr. X, the Marshall proposals will fail. For the European crisis is insoluble if Europe remains divided by the iron curtain, raised by the Russians, and by the containing wall which we are supposed to construct.

But there are reasons for thinking that the Russians will not be able to maintain the iron curtain and that we cannot construct western Europe as a containing wall. They are that the vital needs of the people of Europe will prevail: the economic interdependence of western and eastern Europe will compel the nations of the continent to exchange their goods across the military, political and ideological boundary lines which now separate them.

THE GREAT virtue of the Marshall proposal is that it has set in motion studies abroad and in this country which will demonstrate conclusively that the division of Europe cannot be perpetuated. And since the division of Europe came about because the Red army and the Anglo-American armies met in the middle of Europe, the withdrawal of these armies is necessary if Europe is to be reunited. The Harvard speech calls, therefore, for a policy of setlement, addressed to the military evacuation of the continent, not for a policy of containment which would freeze the non-European armies in the heart of Europe.

The Marshall studies will show that the industrialized areas of western Europe cannot be supported, except to relieve their most pressing immediate needs, from North and South America. They must revive their trade with the agricultural regions of eastern Europe and with European Russia. If they do not do that, the cost of maintaining a tolerable standard of life in western Europe will be exorbitant, and the effort to meet it would require a revolutionary readustment of the economic life of the whole Western Hemisphere.

At the same time studies made in Warsaw, Prague and in Moscow will show that the problems of eastern Europe are insoluble without increasing economic intercourse with western Europe. Thus from all quarters in eastern Europe and in western Europe, in Washington and in Moscow, the pressure will increase to reunite the divided economy of Europe,—and perhaps to go on towards a greater unity than ever existed before.

Citizens Food Group Called To Map Drive Against Waste

A call was issued yesterday for the first meeting Wednesday of the Citizens Food Committee, set up by President Truman Thursday to conduct a program "to waste less food."

As the call went out from the White House, business, labor and farm organizations joined in supporting the aims of the committee and pledging support.

Appeals by both the CIO and the American Federation of Labor for maximum production throughout the country as a means to cut living expenses and also to relieve suffering overseas, coincided with a Government report that industrial production has taken a turn upward.

At the same time, Albert Goss, Master of the National Grange, one of the Big Four of the farm organizations, admonished labor that it "must be patient in its demands."

President Truman will meet at the White House Monday with congressional leaders of both parties. At this meeting the necessity of a special session of Congress to deal with immediate needs of Europe may be determined.

Although reliable reports were that Democratic congressional leaders would advise President Truman against a special session, at least for the time being, demands for an early meeting of Congress continued to pour into the Capital. Among those urging such action were:

1. Chester Bowles, former OPA administrator, who told congressional investigators at Hartford, Conn., that Congress should be called to act on the Marshall Plan and an anti-inflation program.

1. A CIO advisory committee requested the President to summon Congress to restore wartime rationing and price controls. The group predicted that otherwise the United States was headed for "inevitable collapse."

3. Senator Morse (R. Ore.) declared that "hunger isn't going to wait" on Congress. He urged the President to call Congress at once.

After a call at the White House, President William Green of the AFL declared that "full production is the remedy for high prices."

Green, a member of the President's Citizens Food Committee, declared that President Truman's call for voluntary food conservation at home "should help in the fight against inflation and European starvation."

Secretary of Commerce Harriman announced that business groups "have notified me they are ready to cooperate with the President's appeal." Bakers, meat packers, millers and restaurant operators are already working on specific programs, he said.

3 D. C. Men Among 38 Named To Consular Positions Abroad

Three District residents were among 38 men presented with commissions in the foreign service yesterday by Acting Secretary of State Robert A. Lovett in ceremonies at the State Department.

The 38 appointees received commissions as vice consul and diplomatic secretary. Lovett spoke briefly and a reply for the class was made by Rogers B. Horgan.

District men commissioned were Ernest LeRoy Stanger, 3641 39th st. nw.; Sidney Sober, 1512 North Rhodes st., Arlington, Va., and John Bondy Dexter, 8803 Colesville rd., Silver Spring, Md.

Archer Kent Blood of 145 North Princeton, Lynchburg, also was among the appointees. He is 24, a native of Chicago, and a 1943 graduate of the University of Virginia. He was assigned to Salonika, Greece.

Stanger was born at Iona, Idaho, November 26, 1915, is a graduate of Georgetown University, and served during the war in the Army. He has been assigned to Cairo.

Sober, a native of New York City, is 27 and a graduate of City College of New York. A Phi Beta Kappa, he served in the Navy during the war. He was assigned to Tananarive, Madagascar.

Production Rises After 5-Month Fall

The Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday industrial production turned up during August after four successive months of decline.

Recovering most of the previous month's loss, industrial output climbed 5 points in August to a level of 182 per cent of prewar 1935-39 on the Reserve Board's seasonally adjusted index of production.

In July, it had gone down to 177 per cent, bottom point of a slide that had been under way since the postwar peak of 190 was reached in March. The August showing, however, was still 2 points under the mark registered in June.

Summarizing national business conditions during July, the board said:

"Total value of retail trade continued to show little change. Prices of goods in wholesale and retail markets advanced further to new high levels."

Most of the August advance in industrial production was credited to increases in output of nondurable manufactured goods and minerals to levels slightly above June rates. The board said:

"Output of steel rose to a rate of 90 per cent of capacity in August, and indications are that it will average about that rate in September. Automobile production declined further in August, but advanced sharply in September."

Controls Vex Argentina's Exporters

Buenos Aires, Sept. 26 (AP).—The Chamber of Exporters, the chief business organization of overseas traders, in its annual report today charged that government intervention in the export trade had "resulted in ousting Argentina from numerous foreign markets."

The chamber asked that the government's activity in connection with exports be limited to controlling, without taking any direct part in foreign trading.

The chamber said Argentina was losing her foreign markets "because trade queries cannot be answered promptly" and exporters in handling goods which the government leaves to private traders still have to obtain export permits before they can quote prices.

The report added: "The substitution of a state export monopoly for private activity has caused the loss of numerous sales abroad in some cases and in others has caused unfulfillment of sales contracts" which was reducing "the wealth and work of the country."

The chamber then recommended that the government role "be limited to control and development and only exceptionally and in emergencies should the government intervene and then only on the basis of sales between governments."

Bavaria Post Rejected By Philip La Follette

The Army reported yesterday that former Gov. Philip La Follette of Wisconsin had turned down an offer of the governorship of Bavaria in the American occupation zone of Germany.

La Follette recently returned from Germany, where he consulted with Gen. Lucius B. Clay, American commander. The Army, in answer to questions, said La Follette declined the job because of "personal reasons."

Calling Washington

Effects Of Political Turnover

JANNINA, GREECE.—The road to Konitsa is pitted and broken and our battered jeep bounces along at about 12 miles an hour. The mountains rise up on either side, bare and gaunt, with deeply eroded gullies cutting down into the narrow valley.

Childs

The guerillas are said to be on the other side but, for all that one sees of them, they might as well be on the other side of the moon. Back a few miles from the town an artillery unit of the Greek army is sending shells across the mountain with a fine show of military efficiency.

This country in northern Epirus has a wild kind of beauty. The farthest fold of mountains seen in a blue haze is the Albanian border, perhaps 10 miles away. In the valleys, herds of sheep and goats graze in meadows already cropped too close.

If it were not for the war, the herds would be in the mountains with their shepherds. That is now far too risk, and so pastures already overgrazed are still further impaired. In this way the civil war cuts into the primitive economy of a country that before 1940 existed close to the line of poverty and hunger.

ALONG THE ROAD are a few signs of war. Here are the remains of mortar shells fired by the guerillas in their July 13 raid. Blackened patches on the highway mark the spots where army trucks were burned.

We stop at a crossroads village with an ancient stone tavern. A band of shepherds in blue and white homespun stand about leaning on their long crooks. They have a story to tell, and two of the older men tell it with some interruption from the others.

On August 7, while they were grazing their sheep near Konitsa, they were captured by the guerillas. Their flocks, numbering perhaps 5000, were seized and many sheep slaughtered and eaten within a few days by the rebel soldiers.

Were they mistreated? No, they were given food and ordered to tend the sheep that remained. The guerillas told them that the Greek army was made up of bloodthirsty Fascists who meant to kill all democrats and republicans.

Watching the sheep at night they were able to escape about two weeks after their capture. They have wandered along the roads ever since, living as best they could in crude tents. They would try to get more sheep. How and where they did not know.

THESE SIMPLE men, telling their story without guile or adornment, seem a long way off from Athens and the world that is so involved in the feud which caught them up. They were fortunate. Most such stories end in torture or death, burning, pillaging, looting, raping.

Hundreds of villages have been burned in whole or in part, sometimes when government troops were only a short distance away. At various points along the road there are detachments of soldiers. Without them it would be impassable. Recently the sizable town of Florina was cut off so that now it is accessible only by air.

In Jannina, which is primitively picturesque with a strong flavor of the long period of Turkish domination, the officials doubt that the amnesty will bring very many guerillas down from the hills. They estimate that up to 70 per cent of the rebel bands are unwilling followers forced at the point of a gun to go along or who joined up and have since regretted their choice.

They would like to surrender their arms and resume a peaceful life. But they are prevented from doing so by the hard core of convinced Communists who maintain ruthless discipline. Any sign of insubordination is likely to bring death. The men also know that their families may suffer savage punishment in reprisal if they desert.

IT IS A long way to Athens and its clanging trolleys and crowded streets. Yet all the orders come from Athens. Overcentralized control, with the resources for exercising that control primitive at best, is one of the curses of this country. Another curse is the high rate of political turnover in the government which is in turn reflected in the remotest village and crossroads as every last officeholder goes out to be replaced by someone of the incoming party.

The shepherd on the farthest mountain side feels the searing breath of the strife and he understands so little. It is "one world" in a sense quite different from that which Wendell Willkie meant to give to that phrase.

Smith Would Expand Information Service

Vienna, Australia, Sept. 26 (AP).—Senator H. Alexander Smith (R., N. J.) told a news conference here today that the United States must "expand and accelerate" its information services abroad because the American position in foreign affairs was being "completely falsified in Europe."

He added that America would insist that, wherever American relief supplies went in Europe, they must be accompanied by a free flow of information, for both the Americans and the recipients.

Quins Resume Studies With 9 Other Girls

Callander, Ont., Sept. 26 (AP).—The Dionne quintuplets began their eight grade studies today in the company of nine other teen-age girls.

The nursery where the quints played as children has been leased to the Roman Catholic Sisters of the Assumption, who are in charge of the girls' education. The teaching sisters and Mr. and Mrs. Oliva Dionne decided that association with other children of their own age was essential in the development of the quintuplets' personalities. The girls now are 13 years old.

The Gallup Poll

Many French Voters Favor Government Move to the Left

By George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Sept. 26.—One argument offered by supporters of the Marshall Plan is that if we do not aid European countries they will turn more and more to the left, toward communism.

In France there is already some evidence of a pull of public sentiment toward the left.

When asked whether the French government is too far to the right or too far to the left, about one third of French voters polled by the French Institute of Public Opinion said the government is satisfactory as it is, while 26 per cent expressed no opinion. Among the rest, however, the weight of opinion was that the government is too far to the right—that it should, in other words, move in a more leftward direction.

Many Americans undoubtedly have the impression that the French government is, if not a leftiest government, at least not a conservative regime. But in France, apparently, a good many people look upon their government as much too right-wing.

The French Institute, an affiliate of the American Institute and a member of the International Association of Public Opinion (Gallup) Institutes, polled the French voters on the following question:

Poll in France

Is the government in your opinion too far to the right or too far to the left?

Too far right	26%
No opinion	26

Early this week a news dispatch from Paris reported that French government officials had told John W. Snyder, Secretary to the Treasury, that France will go bankrupt unless American loans are forthcoming in the very near future. Observers in Paris were reported as agreeing that French bankruptcy could easily throw the nation into an open clash between Communist and Rightist elements.

Vital Role of Press Is Revealed by Poll

The important role played by newspapers in forming and molding public opinion is indicated by a poll just completed in England by the British Gallup Poll, the results of which parallel a survey of one community in the United States.

Britishers were asked:

What do you rely on most in forming your opinions—magazines, newspapers, books, radio broadcasts, or some other source?

The vote:

Radio	41%
Newspapers	58%
Books	13
Magazines	8
Other	24

The table totals more than 100 percent because some named more than one factor.

In March of this year a survey on the identical question was conducted in Montclair, N. J., by the League of Women Voters, in cooperation with the Gallup Poll. This showed that 73 per cent named newspapers as the most important in forming their opinions, while radio was next with 58 per cent, magazines next with 44 per cent and books received 31 per cent. Six per cent named other sources.

Reed of Kansas Says Eisenhower Is Ideal Choice

By the United Press

Kansas sent another of its prominent Republicans out yesterday to beat the political drums for Eisenhower-for-President in 1948.

Senator Clyde M. Reed, Kansas' junior Senator, announced that Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower is his choice for the GOP presidential nomination because he "speaks the one language the Russians understand—military force."

"The Eisenhower-for-President talk is meeting with wide approval," Reed told a news conference on his arrival from the State in which the Eisenhower boom was born.

"My idea is that Ike's the man because of the sentiment in the country and due to the need for handling the Russian question," he said.

The Kansas lawmaker believed that Eisenhower, who is scheduled to become president of Columbia University early next year, would accept the GOP nomination at Philadelphia next June if it were offered him.

"But don't publish my average," advises this clergyman, who is returning to Washington after a 12-year absence. In 1935 he was transferred from Lewis Memorial Methodist Church here to Linthicum Heights, Md., and then to Memorial Methodist Church, Baltimore.

This 45-year-old cleric also likes to read history and biography when he isn't delving into theological treatises. He is also interested in YMCA work.

Mr. Roberts was assigned to his present charge at the Baltimore Methodist Annual Conference in June. He is a native of Tehuacana, Tex., and studied for two years at Westminster (Tex.) College and for two years at Western Maryland College, Westminster, Md. He was graduated from Westminster Theological Seminary in 1930. He and Mrs. Roberts have a 14-year-old son, Donald Arnem Roberts.

"In my ministry," says Mr. Roberts, "I have always tried to stress the church's total program—evangelism, education, missions; and I am now working on the resumption October 3 of the 'School of Christian Living,' a project for young people, young adults and others interested."

Two Services Set Tomorrow At Cathedral

Movement Toward Uniting Protestants Stirs Talk Here

By Robert Tate Allan
Post Reporter

Further movements toward Protestant church union are stirring discussion in local church circles.

Bishop Ivan Lee Holt, head of the St. Louis Methodist area, this week urged formation of a United States Council of Churches.

Sponsors of "The Crusade for a United Church" include Dr. E. Stanley Jones, the Maryland farm boy who became a famous missionary, and who will speak October 6 at 8 p.m. at Constitution Hall; Herbert Hoover, Mrs. Calvin Coolidge, Douglass Southall Freeman, Richmond educator; Judge Norris C. Bakke, Bible Class teacher at

Hoover Jones Holt Judd

New York Avenue Presbyterian Church; Lowell Thomas, Representative Walter R. Judd (R., Minn.); Gov. Luther D. Youngdahl of Minnesota, and others.

"The Crusade has no desire for an imposed union," says Dr. Jones. "It must come as a result of convictions born of the spirit of God. We have one goal; a Church adequate for its individual, national and world task. Nothing but a united church can be adequate."

Bishop Holt offered the following about church unity:

That unions between the Methodist and Protestant Episcopal and between the Northern Baptist and Disciples of Christ seem logical.

That the Methodist Church should extend an invitation for a still larger union to the new united church resulting from the merger of the Evangelical and United Brethren Churches.

That the Presbyterian-Episcopal union movement would be more likely realized if the Methodist Church were a party to the discussion.

Eastern Upsets Champion Coolidge, 13-12; G.W., Georgetown, Terps, Navy Open Today

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

BERKELEY, CALIF., Sept. 26.—Navy people have been in a dither the last couple of days trying to dispel the idea of any revenge motif in the football game with University of California tomorrow. Their public relations department was panicked when one Oakland newspaper headlined: "Navy will try to win for Wick."

POVICH

Wick is Frank Wickhorst, the Navy graduate who was fired as head football coach by California last season. He was undergraduate buddy of Tom Hamilton, Navy's head coach, and captain of Navy in Hamilton's last year as a player in 1926. Their friendship runs deeply, and it was reported Hamilton did not like the deal Wickhorst got at California.

"Navy is out here to play a football game with a friendly school. We're not on any punitive expedition," ovated Navy's public relations boss, Jerry Flynn, who takes his orders from Hamilton. "There is no Wickhorst angle to this football game."

Hamilton declares he has never injected any "they-can't-do-this-to-a-Navy-man" stuff in his pregame talks to his players. "We don't need that sort of thing to pep our team up. Navy spirit is sufficient, and my players never heard of Wickhorst. Besides that, Lynn Waldorf is a friend of mine."

Wickhorst himself adds the friendliest note. "Why should Navy be sore at Waldorf?" he asked. "He didn't take my job at California. He merely moved into a job that was vacant."

TOMORROW'S Navy-California game has already been marked by the most ambitious sideshow ever staged in connection wth a college contest. California not only booked the Navy football team, but a 56-ship fleet as well, to lend atmosphere. Anyway, the fleet's in, with the flag of Admiral Louis E. Denfield flying from the 45,000-ton battleship Iowa, and 20,000 sailors getting liberty in San Francisco.

It's a wonderful coincidence that the First Task Fleet steamed into San Francisco Bay direct from war maneuvers 24 hours before Navy takes the field against Cal. It stacks up as one of Navy's greatest peace-time stratagems. With the big braid coming ashore, San Francisco is experiencing another gold rush reminiscent of '49.

A lot of Navy folks have suddenly found pressing duty in San Francisco this weekend, and that's forgivable. It's Navy's first appearance in these parts in 23 years. No team ever had so big a cheering section so far from home. Six thousand sailors, not including the braid, have seats to the game.

NAVY HAS BEEN installed the favorite over California for reasons that Coach Tom Hamilton can't comprehend. "Certainly it's not because of our 1946 record," said Hamilton. "After all, we only won one game. California won twice as many—two," he grinned.

But it's plain that Navy is being rated off its sensational game with Army last November 30, when the Middies all but knocked over West Point. That was the afternoon that Navy finally found itself, but there were already indications that Navy was a good football team. In earlier games last season, they were something of a bungling giant who was getting licked by his own mistakes, plus no good share of luck.

Navy lost the Columbia game when one of its touchdowns was disallowed. It held Columbia fod four downs on its 6-yard line, but an offside penalty moved the Lions to Navy's 1 and brought a touchdown. Penalties and fumbles cost 'em the Duke game. A fumble beat 'em in the North Carolina game. Georgia Tech licked 'em with a 95-yard runback of a Navy fumble with two minutes to play. Penn State beat 'em on an intercepted pass."

FULLBACK BILL HAWKINS was the worst offender in the Navy's backfield with his fumbling, but with the sudden development of Reaves Baysinger as first-string quarterback, Navy's efficiency improved. Baysinger's cool handling of the ball from the T-formation finally made Navy a good football team.

It's no secret that Navy's hopes against California are riding with Baysinger He's the man who makes the Navy attack move, with his signal-calling and passes. Because he is also the best pass-defense man, Baysinger may be asked to play 60 minutes tomorrow.

There was one item in the report of Navy scouts at the California-Santa Clara game that pleased Coach Tom Hamilton. On that same afternoon, Hamilton saw his own team passed dizzy by the U. of Washington in a scrimmage. But his scouts reported that Cal completely only three of 16 passes against Santa Clara. "I like that about California," said Hamilton.

Otis Brown Blocks Colt Kicks for Extra Point

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Calvin Coolidge's Colts, last year's Interhigh champions, bumped into a determined Eastern eleven yesterday that sprang a resounding upset at the very start of the scholastic season by fighting to a 13-12 victory.

Fired by the clever quarterbacking of Sal DiGiorgi, last remnant of Eastern's 1945 championship team, and the brilliant ball-toting of Junior Leo Kerschbaum, Eastern's Ramblers rolled 70 yards to a touchdown the first time they laid hands on the ball.

The same twosome sparked the second Ramblers score in the third period.

But stealing the show was the Eastern forward wall that consistently outcharged the Colt line and held the Coolidge ground attack to 33 yards.

Bob Harkey at center and Otis Brown at tackle were the Eastern line standouts, Brown blocking both Coolidge attempts for extra points.

The Ramblers cracked 47 yards on the ground, and 23 through a pass from DiGiorgi to Johnny Brown, for the first touchdown. Kerschbaum went over after sweeping four yards around his own left end. Sonny Wesley booted the extra point that proved to be the margin of victory.

Eastern struck again for a 13-0 lead in the third period after receiving a partially blocked Coolidge punt on the Colt 37. Kerschbaum took DiGiorgi's hand-off, smacked through Coolidge's right tackle, cut sharply to his right and outdistanced four Colts into the end zone. Wesley's attempt at conversion was low.

The Colts, thwarted on the ground, tried air attacks in a desperate fourth quarter rally, and the change in strategy almost won the game.

A Jess Houston to Bobby Rohr pass fell to the turf, but was ruled complete because of interference on the Coolidge 40. Then Houston again found Rohr in the right flat on the 50-yard line. The 1946 All-High halfback snagged the toss and scooted all the way for the score. Jack Tippet's conversion attempt was blocked by Brown.

The Colts again tallied a few minutes later when an exchange of punts gave them the ball on the Eastern 39. Houston passed to Rohr for 13, and again to Tex Jones, who squirmed to the 2. Two cracks at guard by Ralph Scheaffer gave Coolidge the touchdown. Again Brown blocked Tippet's try for extra point.

Wynn Beaten, 11-8, but Nats Win 2d, 4-3

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

After being chilled, 11 to 8, by the Aethletics in the first game of a twilight double-header at Griffith Stadium last night, the Nats turned around and gave the Mackmen the cold shoulder in the nightcap.

Theey won the nip-and-tuck affair, played on a very nippy evening, 4-3. The victory blotted out the last chance the A's had to finish in the first division.

Rookie Gil Coan, who got three of the eight Washington hits off Bill McCahan, struck the winning blow—a double—which provided Ray Scarborough with his sixth win of the year.

Coan's hit over Left Fielder Barney McCosky's head sent Johnny Sullivan from first in the eighth with the run that broke a 3-3 tie.

McCahan, who pitched a no-hitter against the Nats September 3, wasn't quite that effective last night. Three of the hits he allowed were doubles, but four errors his mates made helped his cause none whatsoever.

Stan Spence was the whole Nat show in the opener. He drove in six runs with his fourteenth and fifteenth homeruns of the year plus a single. This made the crowd of 3175, low mark of the year, very happy, but not warm.

Early Wynn was trying for his eighteenth decision in the opener but didn't quite make it. As a matter of fact, he wasn't even in the ball game after the second inning. He suffered a four-run first inning. But improved 100 per cent in the next frame, allowing only two runs.

Tatum Terps Are Mystery

By a Post Reporter

Columbia, S. C., Sept. 26.—Coach Jim Tatum takes the wraps off of his first Maryland University football production against South Carolina tomorrow afternoon and is hopeful, but not too confident, he can display a winner.

The Terps, 38 strong, arrived here by plane and took a light workout at Carolina Stadium where over 20,000 fans are expected to see them launch their Southern Conference program. Kickoff is at 3:30, Washington time.

The Terrapins are a mystery team insofar as their capabilities are concerned. Tatum, imported from Oklahoma after a highly successful season last year, inherited most of the material Clark Shaughnessy was unable to do anything with last year.

This, plus a few importations of

Middies Have Best Chance of Winning

The four major college teams of the Washington area—George Washington, Georgetown, Maryland and Navy—open the 1947 football season today. All games are on foreign fields.

Navy apparently has the best chance of winning from the University of California in a clash at Berkeley.

A Maryland victory over South Carolina at Columbia, S. C., would not be startling, but Georgetown—at Wake Forest—and George Washington—at Virginia—are decided underdogs.

Last year's results: South Carolina, 21, Maryland 17; Wake Forest, 19, Georgetown, 6; George Washington-Virginia did not play; Navy-California did not play.

Wake Forest-G. U. Wide Open Affair

Wake Forest, N. C., Sept. 26.—A fast-drying field coupled with a forecast of clear and cool gave support to the general belief that tomorrow night's season's debut for both Georgetown and Wake Forest will be a wide-open, strictly offensive affair.

With an all-veteran club which averages 213 pounds in the line and 195 in the backfield, the Deacons have been established as 7-point favorites over the Hoyas, whom they defeated, 19-6, last year, in their only previous meeting.

Quarterback Elmer Raba, the former Gonzaga key man who was injured against the Deacons last year, occupies the same position with Coach Jack Hagerty's T formation operators this fall.

In Tailback Tommy Fetzer, a 168-pound swiftie who also does most of the passing and kicking, the Deacons have one of the best backs in Dixie. Clearing the path for him will be big, burly Nick Ogonovich, twice voted the best blocker in the Southern Conference.

Virginia Favored To Beat Colonials

Charlottesville, Va., Sept. 26.—A George Washington University eleven whose potentialities are little known will bump into an improved Virginia University team today at Charlottesville in the season's opener.

The kickoff will be at 4 p. m., Washington time, with about 20,000 fans in the stands and Virginia the favorite.

George Washington, somewhat crippled, will rely on a sturdy line averaging more than 200 pounds to stop Virginia's hard running game and varied pass attack. Key men in G. W.'s defense are Carl Butka and Harvey Shippman, 245-pound tackles.

It is in the backfield that G. W.'s strength is questionable. Most of the running burden will be placed on little Jimmy Kline, a freshman scatback. Charlies Butler and Skinner will handle much of the passing.

Baysinger Gives Navy Slight Edge

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Berkeley, Calif., Sept. 26.—Against the inspirational backdrop of the 56-ship first task fleet in San Francisco Bay, Navy's football team awaits its clash tomorrow with the University of California in the Pacific Coast's big game of the day.

The Navy squad, bedded down at the Alameda Naval Air Station, got its last briefing tonight from Coach Tom Hamilton, and that much-decorated flier put it in terms of an assault on California.

"You came 3000 miles to hit this target," Hamilton said, "and the last 100 yards are the roughest. Hit 'em like you hit Army last year and we'll do all right."

Navy, despite its known lack of reserves, has been installed over the Bears at odds ranging from 6 to 5 and 8 to 5. Memorial Stadium's 79,289 seats were sold out a day before the game.

Bears Have the Reserves

Against Navy, Coach Lynn Waldorf will throw a big California team that owns the reserve strength Navy lacks, but has thus far produced no outstanding backfield figure like Reaves Baysinger, Hamilton's T-formation quarterback who kicks, runs and passes.

It's Navy's opening game, in contrast to California, which knocked over Santa Clara impressively, 33-7, last week in what California fans are visioning as the start of rehabilitation of the Bears football fortunes under Waldorf, imported from Northwestern.

For the past week Hamilton and his aides have been drilling into their squad the high necessity of stopping the end sweeps of the California backs. It was the sweep running of George Fong, Chinese halfback, and the swashbuckling Jack Swaner and Jackie Jensen that produced the California victory over Santa Clara.

Hamilton today announced one change in Navy's starting lineup. Ed Golding, who has been playing a smashing game in recent scrimmages, will replace Ken Shwieck, left guard. Shwieck suffered a slight arm injury last week.

Billy Earl Will Be Busy

In the backfield, Baysinger will be flanked by Fullback Bill Hawkins, whom Navy rates with the top line-smashers of the Nation; Al McCully, the right halfback whose injury status was a blow to Navy last season, and Pistol Pete Williams, left halfback, who repre-

Boxing Group Fined $2500 For Dealing With 'Criminals'

New York, Sept. 26 (AP).—A $2500 fine was levied today on the Twentieth Century Sporting Club by the State Athletic Commission which said the club had had dealings "with unlicensed individuals with criminal records" in staging boxing bouts at Madison Square Garden.

The commission said the fine was imposed on the club "for its action against the best interests of the sport" and added a reprimand to the organization "for its past action."

"It (the commission) also warns it (the club) that any evidence in the future of such dealings and negotiations will be dealth with by this committee in an appropriate manner," said a statement by the athletic body.

Sol Strauss, acting director and secretary of the club, was called before the commission but waived rights to a public hearing.

Edward P. F. Eagan, the commission chairman, said Strauss told him he had no comment on the fine and reprimand but assured him the $2500 would be paid promptly.

The commission said its action "will give all clubs fair wafning that it intends to keep boxing, as a sport, free from criminal and sinister elements.

"It also serves notice to all concerned that those connected with the sport must have a license and any legal evidence that any individual is an 'undercover' manager or one who cannot obtain a license will be sent to the proper authorities for action."

The commission indicated its ac-

Suggs, Kirby Enter Finals

Detroit, Sept. 26 (AP).—Two sparkling golfing gals from Atlanta, trim little Louise Suggs of Lithia Springs and tall, slim Dorothy Kirby turned the forty-seventh women's national amateur into an all-Southern finish today. Both girls belong to the Capital City Country Club.

Miss Suggs, medalist and pre-tournament favorite, shot 2-under-par golf for the 16 holes it required her in semifinal play to stop Grace Lenczyk, 20-year-old Newington, Conn., star, 4 and 2, while Miss Kirby was 2 over par in ousting the last of the former champions, Mrs. Sstelle Lawson Page of Chapel Hill., N. C., 4 and 3.

Tomorrow's 36-hole windup at Franklin Hills finds Miss Suggs facing Miss Kirby for the third time this year in the championship match of a major tournament. Miss Suggs beat her Georgia rival to take both the Southern amateur and Western Open crowns.

Miss Suggs shot steady golf for her triumph over Miss Lenczyk, who won the Canadian women's open just a week ago and had scored three top heavy victories in match play to get into the semi-finals here.

Central Beats Anacostia, 12-0; Pantos Paces Attack

Central's Vikings, picked to finish prominently in this year's Interhigh race, got off to a good start yesterday as they downed Anacostia's Indians, 12-0, at Central.

The Vikings, held scoreless in the first half by a fighting Anacostia eleven, needed a great second half to come out on top.

In the second quarter, Central got possession of the ball on its own 38-yard line by way of an Indian punt. Jim Pantos hit Hal Sponsler for a first down on the Anacostia 11. Charley Fuller took it to the six and Pantos went to the three. The Indians dug in, however, and that was the only scoring threat in the first half.

In the second half, Pantos fell on Chow Echavez's fumble, giving the Vikings a first down on the Anacostia 29. Ross Keith lugged it to the 18 and then again to the 16 for another first. On the next play, Central broke the ice when Pantos took a lateral pass for a touchdown. Bill Deniko's kick was no good.

In the fourth quarter Frasur's pass was intercepted by Millon and returned to the Anacostia 39-yard line. Ross Keith took it to the 2, where he was brought down from behind by Dixon.

Two plays later and with two seconds remaining in the game, Keith plunged over from the 1 to make the final score 12-0. Once again Deniko's kick failed.

North Carolina, Navy, Rice Picked as Grid Gears Shift Into High

New York, Sept. 26 (AP).—Pushing off for another rough ride along the collegiate gridiron trail with the first forecast of a season that promises to yield more surprises than a schoolboy's pockets:

Georgia vs. North Carolina—Two Dixie powers picking up where they left off on New Year's Day. The Sugar Bowl decision in reverse. Georgia without Trippi doesn't figure to take North Carolina with Justice. Don't let the Bulldog's lethargy against Furman fool you, but cast one healthy ballot for North Carolina.

Rice vs. Louisiana State—Probably one of the best games of the day, or night, and certainly one of the closest. Both are conference favorites, Rice in the Southwest and LSU in the Southeastern. LSU won last year, 7-6, and it could be that close again, although the other way. One shaky vote for the Owls, of Rice.

Navy vs. California—By scaring the daylights out of Army in last year's windup, Navy set the pattern for a comeback this autumn. Pistol Pete Williams and his Middie mates are loaded for bear, California variety. A cheer for Pappy Waldorf in his new job, but a broadside of votes for Navy.

Villanova vs. Army — Those Wildcats have been waiting for this and seem to have the stuff to make it close for a change. Earl Blaik still has a few football players left, however. One confident vote for Army.

Purdue vs. Wisconsin—Purdue should win some games on the passing of Bob De Moss and the inspirational leadership of Stu Holcomb, but not this one. The Badgers can stay out of the Big Nine cellar. Wisconsin.

Alabama vs. Tulane — Red Drew inherited a jewel in Harry Gilmer, whose passing arm may spell the difference in this Southeastern Conference struggle. One grand slam for Alabam'.

Texas vs. Oregon — Each team has a new coach and one game under its belt, but the Longhorns have Bobby Layne. A clear-cut vote for Texas.

Pittsburgh vs. Illinois — The Rose Bowl champs lost Young, Rykovich and Agase, but they won't miss 'em tomorrow. Put it down for Illinois.

Washington State vs. California —If the Trojans can't win this one they can forget their title aspirations. Southern Cal.

North Carolina State vs. Duke—Wallace Wade's Blue Devils haven't forgotten what happened last year. With that in mind, Duke.

Washington vs. Minnesota.—The Huskies have tried this four times and haven't succeeded yet. This isn't their year. Minnesota.

Tennessee vs. Georgia Tech.—They start knocking each other off early in that Southeastern Conference. Out of the hat, Georgia Tech.

Running rapidly over the East of the day's better games:

EAST—Columbia over Rutgers, Cornell over Lehigh, Holy Cross over Dartmouth, Yale over Kings Point, Harvard over Western Maryland, Brown over Connecticut, West Virginia over Otterbein, Bates over Massachusetts, Bucknell over Alfred, Delaware over Penn Military, Maine over Rhode Island, Muhlenberg over Lafayette.

MIDWEST — Northwestern over Vanderbilt, Michigan over Michigan State, Indiana over Nebraska, Ohio State over Missouri, Colorado over Iowa State, Marquette over South Dakota, Iowa Teachers over North Dakota.

SOUTH—Mississippi over Florida, Kentucky over Cincinnati, William and Mary over Davidson, Mississippi State over Chattanooga, Virginia over George Washington, Maryland over South Carolina, Wake Forest over Georgetown, Citadel over Presbyterian, Richmond over Washington and Lee, Virginia Military over Catawba, Virginia Tech over Furman.

SOUTHWEST AND FAR WEST —Texas A. and M. over Texas Tech, Texas Christian over Oklahoma A. and M., Arkansas over North Texas, Southern Methodist over Santa Clara, Oregon State over Utah, Stanford over Idaho, St. Mary's over Hawaii, on Sunday.

Power to Burn

Bethesda Wins From Sherwood

Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School swamped Sherwood High School yesterday 26-0 in the opening game of the season for both teams, at Meadowbrook recreation center.

Advancing 92 yards in the first four plays, Bethesda scored immediately when Paul Kamp passed to Dick Parkinson from the Sherwood 30-yard line. The conversion attempt was good.

After a 74-yard march up field Herb Spani ran for the second Bethesda touchdown of the quarter, amound left end and Kemp passed to End Dick Beckwith for the extra point.

In the second quarter, Spain again ran the ball to score after his teammates had driven the ball from the 45-yard mark to the four. Kamp passed to McCaulliff for the conversion.

The last score of the game came when Duncan Cameron intercepted a Sherwood pass and ran 25 yards for a touchdown.

Nobody Phones For Pirates' Job

Pittsburgh, Sept. 26 (AP).—The hapless Pittsburgh Pirates were without a manager today—and the only line of applicants for the job vacated by Billy Herman's resignation was formed from guesswork.

"Maybe nobody wants to manage us," joined Roy Hamey, who holds the front office post of general manager. "We haven't had a single phone call all day."

The situation was not quite as serious as Hamey's little joke made it but the club owners insisted they had made no decision on Herman's successor and probably would not "before New York"—which means during the World Series.

Stan Hack, Lee, Passeau Released

Chicago, Sept. 26 (AP).—Third Baseman Stan Hack and Pitchers Claude Passeau and Bill Lee were released unconditionally by the Chicago Cubs today.

The Cubs also scratched Shortstop Billy Jurges from the active player list, but retained him as coach.

Hack was expected to remain with the Cub organization, either as a coach or a minor league manager. Passeau has been troubled with a sore arm, while Lee has been optioned to Tulsa of the Texas League since June 30.

Tickets Available Today for 'Skins

As a convenience to Redskins fans, the Junior Chamber of Commerce office, Room 220, Star Building, will remain open for the sale of railroad tickets to the Redskins-Philadelphia Eagles game until 5 p. m. today.

The special excursion fare for the trip to Philadelphia is $6.11. Trains will leave on the B. & O. at 10:20 a. m. and the Pennsylvania railroad at 10:45 a. m.

New Orleans Editor Takes Bowl Post

New Orleans, Sept. 26 (AP).—Fred Digby, veteran sports editor of the New Orleans Item for 24 years, resigned today to become general manager of the New Orleans Mid-Winter Sports Association, which directs the Sugar Bowl. His duties as full-time manager will be assumed November 1.

Digby is president of the Southern Chapter of the Football Writers Association of America.

Two More Horses Die

Salem, N. H., Sept. 26 (AP).—Six more swamp fever stricken thoroughbreds were destroyed at Rockingham Park today, boosting the two-day total to 11.

No Official Wagering on Match Race

New York, Sept. 26 (AP).—The most-talked-of horse race in a decade—the $100,000 match race between Armed and Assault—is definitely on for Belmont Park tomorrow.

For the second time in a week, Robert J. Kleberg, jr., the Texas rancher who owns Assault, today overruled Trainer Maxie Hirsch, who wanted to withdraw from the mile and a quarter race, and declared officially that the clubfoot comet would go to the post at 3:53 p. m. (EDT) in the tussle that headlines what is probably the richest program in turf history.

And in spite of Hirsch's unwillingness to run and the ailing splint bone in Assault's left foreleg, this gallop between the horses who are second and third on racing's all-time money winning list—Armed has a bankroll of $642,900 and Assault $623,370—has the folks as steamed up as a raise in pay.

Belmont officials are looking for a crowd of upward of 50,000. Already, the advance guard had checked in tonight from Los Angeles and Dallas and Baltimore and, of course, from Kentucky, where Armed is the darling-of-the-blue grass.

They won't get to bet, however, unless they find bookmakers who will give them some action. Late today, George D. Widener, boss of Belmont, decided—with permission of the State Racing Commission—that there would be no investing in the mutuels tomorrow because of the uncertainty concerning the Texas terror's condition.

Altogether, a total of $182,500 in added money will be cut up among the quickest horses on the nine-race card tomorrow—a one-day total that has never before been equaled.

W-L Upset By Charlotte Hall, 25-7

Charlotte Hall (Md.) Military Academy's hard-hitting Cadets, led by Quarterback Jack Mattingly, who completed 9 out of 12 passes, snapped the nine-game winning streak of Washington-Lee High of Arlington as they defeated the Little Generals, 25-7, yesterday before 2500 at W.-L. Stadium.

The defeat was the first suffered by W.-L. since October 19, 1946.

The defeat was the first suffered by the Little Generals since October 19, 1946. Injuries to several key players early in the game took most of the punch from the W-L attack.

Most seriously injured was All-High End Jack McGill, who was removed to Arlington City Hospital in the fourth quarter with a pair of broken ribs.

Leg injuries caused W-L's star fullback Dickie Lewis and Tailback Monk Carney to retire in the first quarter and Guard Bill Heintzelman went out in the third period with a sprained ankle.

Ed Holley, another guard, Center Mike Lloyd and Halfback Jimmy Kelley were each kayoed once.

The Cadets scored in the first period on a 41-yard pass play, Mattingly to Don Bialock. Mattingly scored again in the second quarter on a one-yard quarterback sneak.

Stuyvesant School gridders scored a 13-0 victory over St. Albans of Washington at the latter's field yesterday.

The Flying Dutchmen's Benny Marshall chucked 5 yards to Harry Heflin in the end zone for the victors' first score early in the fourth quarter. Dale Tyrell converted from placement. Fullback Wally McClanahan added another six points on a 5-yard buck shortly afterward.

Navy Favored To Win Opener

sents the speed of the Navy backfield.

Little Billy Earl, 160-pound scatback, will also se considerable action as the replacement for either Williams or McCully.

In three positions, Navy concedes nothing to California. The Bears have nothing to match the talented Baysinger at quarterback, the Middies declare; nor any lineman to stack up with big Dick Scott, Navy's All-American center candidate. They believe, too, that Art Markel will be the best end on the field.

Phil Ryan, substitute end of last year, has been assigned the other wing job opposite Markel, and Navy coaches have been impressed with his all-around play.

Navy has high confidence in its first team, but is worried at the prospect of injuries that could call for reserves. Particularly is Line Coach Rip Miller bothered by the lack of depth, but he has in Dick Shimshak a tackle who played 60 minutes against Army. "We may end up with a half dozen 60-minute men tomorrow," Hamilton said.

Both Navy and California are eager. They lost prestige last year when they won only one and two games, respectively. Navy last year was a fumbling outfit that did not click until its last game of the season. Waldorf was brought to California at the end of the season in a desperate move to restore the Bears to high ranking nationally.

It will be a clash of T-formation teams, with Waldorf using the orthodox T, while Hamilton is a disciple of the Missouri style split formation. Navy, however, is not above going into the single wing on occasion and Hamilton is counting on Baysinger's deftness at handling the ball to confuse the Bears.

Greiner's 141 Takes First In District Open Tourney

Otto Greiner, 28-year-old Woodholme Country Club professional, won first prize in the $1500 District open golf tournament yesterday with a 141 total for 36 holes over the Indian Spring Country Club course.

After shooting a 68 Thursday over the water-soaked links, Greiner slumped to 73 yesterday in favorable weather.

This lapse, however, failed to dissolve the Baltimore star's lead, although Bobby Brownell, amateur standout from Manor, came within two strokes of equaling Greiner's total.

Brownell shot a sparkling 68, but his first day's score of 75 proved too much of an obstacle and Bob finished with 143 and second place.

Roger Peacock, the Sligo Park professional, and Walter Romans, Baltimore Country Club pro, ended in a deadlock with Amateur Spencer Overton for third position with 144 scores. Peacock had trailed Greiner by a stroke at the end of the first day's play, but had a 75 yesterday. Romans, with a 76 the first day, whizzed around in 68 yesterday.

Overton, Rolling Road Country Club star, put together rounds of 73 and 71 for his 144.

tion was based on minutes sent to it by a New York County grand jury which last winter began an investigation of boxing.

The investigation was begun after District Attorney Frank S. Hogan had announced Rocky Graziano, explosive middleweight fighter, had admitted being offered a $100,000 bride to throw a fight.

Graziano, now middleweight champion, had his license revoked by the State commission last February 7 for failing to report the bribe offer, but won the title in a bout with Tony Zale in Chicago. He testified before the grand jury.

In an interim report February 28, the jury said there was a "criminal element" in boxing and added that fighters hesitated to complain of abuses because they feared "the underworld grip on professional boxing" was so strong they might be barred from future bouts.

Strauss has been acting head of the club since Mike Jacobs suffered a serious illness January 6. Jacobs was not mentioned in the statement.

Bob Wolff to Help Televise on Series

Bob Wolff, WTTG-DuMont sportcaster who has covered the home games of the Nats for WTTG, will be the only Washington sportscaster to cover the World Series in television. Other sports announcers also scheduled to furnish commentary during the first televised series: Bob (NBC) Stanton, Bob (CBS) Edge, and Bill (N. Y. Dumont) Slater.

Atom Study Participation Is Announced At Catholic U.

Academic Training For Future Nuclear Specialists Planned Under New Program

Catholic University will participate in the Oak Ridge Institute of Nuclear Studies' program by providing academic training for future atomic specialists and as a consultant in research.

This was disclosed yesterday by Dr. Karl F. Herzfeld, head of the university's physics department and its representative on the institute's council, following the announcement that 14 Southern universities and a score of industries would participate in the University of Chicago's operation of Clinton National Laboratory at Oak Ridge, Tenn.

The University of Virginia is also among the 14 universities to participate in the program sponsored by the Atomic Energy Commission, which is seeking to intensify efforts to apply energy to industry and engineering.

According to Dr. Herzfeld, Catholic University and other participating institutions will train graduate students interested in nuclear work on their own campuses until the course of studies is completed.

Findings to Be Reviewed

The work on their dissertations in the nuclear field, which needs equipment not available at Catholic University, will be done at Oak Ridge, either at Clinton National Laboratory or the laboratories of the manufacturing plants erected there under the auspices and supervision of the institute.

The opportunities to work in nuclear physics will be awarded under stiff competition at Catholic University and the other member schools of the institute, he said, but students at nonmember universities may also compete for the openings. Dr. Herzfeld said the total number of advanced students to work at Oak Ridge had been tentatively set at 25. He anticipated none would be eligible before next June at the earliest.

"It is hoped that this arrangement will not only promote our knowledge of the mysterious nucleus and of the peaceful uses of atomic energy," he said, "but also help in training experts in this field.

"The number of experts is still woefully small, but progress depends on trained men even more than on equipment."

Third Laboratory

Clinton Laboratories, previously operated by Monsanto Chemical Co., and one of the installations built by the Manhattan District, is to be the third of the Atomic Energy Commission's national laboratories.

The oldest national laboratory is the Argonne Laboratory near Chicago, managed under contract with the commission by the University of Chicago with the cooperation of other Midwestern universities.

To serve the Northeast, Brookhaven National Laboratory is being built on Long Island under the management of nine institutions, among which is Johns Hopkins University.

Clinton Laboratories are mainly devoted to fundamental research, but with emphasis on certain fields, Dr. Herzfeld said. The atomic furnace, or pile, there at present is the main source of radioactive isotopes, which promise to be of the greatest importance in medicine, chemistry and agriculture and their use has just been offered internationally.

Also emphasized at Clinton is the investigation of the biological effect of radiation, both from the standpoint of medical treatment and of development of better protection from damage. Peaceful use of the pile for power supply also involves engineering problems which are under study there.

Bid of $43,123 Is Lowest on Streetcar Work

The District will spend more than $40,000 this fall to build streetcar loading platforms and directional "islands" for traffic channelization, Highway Director H. C. Whitehurst revealed yesterday.

Chief Engineer Clerk P. M. Lumpkins said Highway Construction Co., 9th and Brentwood rd. ne., was the lower of two bidders with $43,123 estimates for the project.

Whitehurst said the streetcar loading platforms would be installed at various locations in the downtown area.

Capitol st. and Livingston rd. se.; on Connecticut ave. nw., at S st. and Florida ave.; west side of Connecticut ave. nw., from M to 18th sts.

Woman Shot, Home Deal Partner Held

Edgar C. McFarland, 48, was charged by Montgomery County police with assault with intent to kill Mrs. Thelma Alva Conredi, 33, after she was shot early yesterday in a bedroom on the first floor of a Derwood, Md., house which they own jointly.

McFarland, an equipment engineer at the Naval Gun Factory, was released in $1000 bond last night after all-day questioning during which he maintained Mrs. Conredi had shot herself, police said.

Mrs. Conredi, who was in fair condition last night after surgeons at Suburban Hospital, Bethesda, had removed a .38-caliber bullet from her left side, was quoted by police as accusing McFarland of shooting her.

Seen With Gun in Hand

The victim's mother, Mrs. Lula Rogers, 77, who also lives at the house, said she went to the first-floor bedroom when she heard the shot and saw McFarland emerging from the room with a gun in his hand.

According to police at Rockville station, where McFarland was questioned most of the day, he said he was in the living room of the house when he heard the shot. He walked into the room, picked up the gun and was coming out again when Mrs. Rogers appeared, he declared. After throwing the revolver on the couch, he said, he went to a neighboring house and called police. The Rockville rescue squad took Mrs. Conredi to the hospital.

Argued Over Sale of House

According to Mrs. Rogers, the shooting occurred at about 8:30 a. m., after the two had argued over McFarland's desire to sell the attractive two-story house. Mrs. Conredi, who is employed as a clerk-typist by the District Health Department, opposed the sale, her mother said.

Mrs. Conredi's twin sister, Mrs. Alma Gasney, who also is employed by the District Health Department, said Mrs. Conredi had lost her husband, Harold Conredi, about two years ago. He died as he was returning after being discharged from an Army hospital, he said.

Mrs. Conredi has a 17-year-old son, Carl, who left Sunday after enlisting in the Army and being assigned to California. Her brother, Ulysses S. Rogers, is a sergeant in the Ninth Precinct here.

Scarlet Fever Afflicts Man Held by Police

A 30-year-old man held in the cell block in the Fifth Precinct stationhouse was taken to Gallinger Hospital yesterday where his case was diagnosed as scarlet fever.

He is Junior C. Hardee, 30, 320 B st. ne. His condition was described as fair.

Police authorities called up the Health Department and were advised to clean up the cell block but that the condition was not serious enough to warrant quarantining the cell block or stationhouse.

Dr. James Cumming of the Health Department, said that scarlet fever was primarily a children's disease and was spread largely by saliva. Because of this, he said, he did not advise quarantine.

At any rate, the policemen cleaned out the cell block, and sprayed it with DDT, they reported. The one other prisoner in the cells at that time was kept in the witness room as a precaution in case he should become infected.

He was advised, police said, not to kiss anybody.

'Black Sambo' Story Use Protested

The use of the story of "Little Black Sambo" in the District public schools drew a protest yesterday from the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Dr. Hobart M. Corning, superintendent of schools for the District, immediately came to the defense of the story, declaring it "an implement to racial understanding."

The protest was contained in a letter to Dr. Corning from William Allyn Hill, executive secretary of the Washington branch of NAACP.

"We protest against the use of this type of material as harmful and contrary to the promotion of friendly relations between Americans of 'different colors and we respectfully request that the Board of Education direct that all such materials be withdrawn from the schools," the letter said.

Dr. Corning, expressing his surprise at the objection, said that the story is "a great favorite of children who learn to love 'Little Black Sambo.'

"Far from casting ridicule," Dr. Corning said, "the story builds up better racial understanding. It has a constructive point of view."

The schools' superintendent described the story as "part of the racial heritage of America" which is taught in the schools.

"It is very important," he said, "that this heritage be understood."

Sambo was a little Indian boy, created in Helen Bannerman's book first published in England in 1899. In her story he was pursued around a tree by a tiger, which melted in the sun and turned into butter.

It was written for her children, whom she had left in Scotland to return to India with her husband, a British army surgeon. It was the most popular of several children's books she wrote and has been translated in at least three languages. It was first published in the United States in 1900.

The use of the "Little Black Sambo" story in the schools was brought to the attention of the NAACP, their letter said, through an article that appeared in The Washington Post last Tuesday.

The article described the opening day of the first grade at the Park View Elementary School. The teacher showed the children a picture of "Little Black Sambo" which was among a group of illustrations used in gaining the attention and interest of the children. It was explained in the story that such materials establish a group feeling which is essential to teaching.

Second School Tour on Today In Arlington

Five Arlington school board candidates who last Saturday launched a school-by-school inspection of Arlington's educational facilities will make a second tour beginning at 9 a. m. today.

The five were chosen as candidates by the Arlington Schoool Board Nominating Convention, made up of delegates from 51 Arlington civic groups. Picked were O. Glen Stahl, Curtis Tuthill, Colin MacPherson, Mrs. Edmund Campbell, and Bernard Joy.

Today, they visit the James Madison, John Marshall, John Langston, Robert E. Lee, Charles Stewart and Walter Reed Schools. On the successive Saturdays of October 4, 11, 18 and 25, the remainder of the 31 schools will be toured.

Five rival school board candidates, sponsored by the Greater Arlington Association are William M. Smith and E. C. Betts, jr., both incumbents; E. T. Gearhart, jr., R. M. Kimble and Dr. Charles P. Cake. Incumbent Mrs. Lucy G. Bussey also is running as an independent.

Inspection tours by the convention candidates are being held to "get at the facts" of Arlington's often-criticized school system, according to Candidate Joy.

Clocks Turn Back an Hour Tomorrow

Return of EST At 2 A. M., EDT Is Simple in Home, Not So on Railroad

The District tomorrow will get back the hour it turned away last May.

After five months of daylight savings time, clocks and watches, but not sundials and hour glasses, go back 60 minutes, effective at 2 a. m. Sunday.

At that hour, the timepieces will be turned back from 2 a. m. to 1 a. m., but the simple operation may be done upon retiring, assuming bedtime is still daylight saving.

The change is more complicated for transportation lines, particularly railroads, which operate on standard time. Most of the changes will be paper revisions, but in some cases schedules have been altered as much as an hour and twenty minutes.

Major changes, effective tomorrow, reported by the Baltimore & Ohio trains are: No. 11 to St. Louis, changed from 6:40 a. m. to 8 a. m.; the Washingtonian to Cleveland, from 10 a. m. to 10:05 a. m.; the Diplomat to St. Louis, changed from 7 p. m. to 8:20 p. m.; the Shenandoah to Chicago, 10:45 p. m. to 11:40 p. m.; the West Virginian to Parkersburg, from 10:55 p. m. to 10:30 p. m. The 9 a. m. train to New York will leave at 9:15 Sunday and thereafter, and the 12:00 will leave at 11:40 a. m.

Pennsylvania trains to New York will run every hour one the hour from 7 a. m. to 9 p. m., with no regularly scheduled 10 p. m. train. The sleeper to New York will now leave at 1 a. m. The Red Arrow to Detroit will leave at 5:20 p. m. instead of 5:30 and the Spirit of St. Louis will leave at 6:25 instead of 6:20.

The Erie sleeper to Erie, Pa., will leave at 6:50 instead of 7:30. The Silver Meteor on the Seaboard line will leave at 7:05 instead of 6:10.

Changes on the Atlantic Coast Line include: the Champion (East Coast), formerly 6 p. m. will leave at 6:40 p. m.; the Miamian, now 7 p. m., will be 7:10 p. m.; the Champion (West Coast, was 7:30 p. m., will be $7:45 p. m., and the Palmetto, changed from 7:40 p. m. to 7:50 p. m.

No changes have been reported by the Chesapeake & Ohio or the Southern Railroads.

Trailways and Greyhound Bus companies report no changes in their schedules as a result of the time change.

D. C. to Probe Locking Up Hospital Case

Lack of coordination among city departments, rather than legal technicalities, was blamed by Commissioner Guy Mason yesterday for "mix-ups" where persons are taken from Municipal Court to jail for "hospitalization."

Mason said he had ordered Corrections Superintendent Donald Clemmer to investigate the September 13 case of Mrs. Mary E. Murrill, 32, of 412 6th st. nw.

Mrs. Murrill, The Washington Post revealed, was taken to jail after Municipal Court Judge George D. Neilson ordered her sent to Gallinger Hospital for treatment.

Mason said he would study Clemmer's report, then arrange for a conference requested by Judge Neilson. The judge also invited Clemmer and Col. Curtis Reid, superintendent of the jail, to participate.

"This is not a matter of law," Mason declared, "but a matter of coordination among departments."

"There's nothing alarming about it and I'm sure it can be corrected very simply," he added.

Mrs. Murrill appeared in Municipal Court to press an assault complaint against her husband. Her head and face injuries were so serious that Judge Neilson ordered her sent to Gallinger Hospital and held as a witness.

Instead of being taken to the hospital, she was kept in jail for five days. Judge Neilson said he would take steps to find out why. He said he hoped the conference would be able to work out means of avoiding similar incidents.

Railroads Hold Rental Rate Boost Would Reduce Use

Counsel for 180 railroads fighting an Interstate Commerce Commission order raising freight car rental rates, yesterday told a three-judge tribunal in District Court that the order would decrease utilization of the cars.

The railroads held that if the ICC were right in its contention that the increased rates would speed the movement of "hired" cars, it would also mean that cars would be sent back empty rather than kept on hand by the renter in hopes of getting a shipping contract.

Counsel for the ICC, opposing the railroad's motion for a temporary injunction to prevent the 50-cent per diem increase, asserted that no actual cash would change hands for 30 days, when accounts are settled. They said the court would have plenty of time to rule on the increase without the railroad's finances being affected. The case was recessed until Monday.

Centenarian Artist Can't Tell When Her 'Birthdays Began'

The Washington Post

COMPANIONS—Mrs. Adelaide Johnson, who is 100 years old today, reads in a quiet setting near her marble impression of Lucretia Mott, a bust which she will sell

"No, I can't tell you when my birthdays began," she chuckled. "People have been asking me that for nearly 100 years."

But famed sculptress Adelaide Johnson, who celebrated a century or therreabouts of living yesterday, forgot her joviality for a moment to ponder a favorite subject—women.

As she piled high her knee-length hair, now almost white, and powdered her comparatively unwrinkled face, the one-time active women's rights worker asserted:

"Woman has never been awake yet. She doesn't know she exists. She's only risen to where she makes a pretty good breeder for men."

Pressed for an elaboration, in the overcrowded bedroom containing volumes of works on Susan B. Anthony and Lucretia Mott, pioneers of women's suffrage, Mrs. Johnson refused either to elaborate or retract.

She would only say again, in her characteristically independent way:

"Women have never been alive. They won't come alive until woman is born."

Equally depressed over the state of the world, although acknowledging a "philosophic happiness" in her own life, Mrs. Johnson commented:

"The world is pretty awful. There's lots of knowledge and information but no ethics."

Mrs. Elizabeth C. Derrill, superviser of housekeeping assistance for indigents under the District of Columbia Health Department, stopped in to wish Mrs. Johnson "many more happy birthdays."

Coolly, the elderly rebel, who some years ago battered many of her works of art in wrath over threatened eviction from her sparsely furnished house at 230 Maryland ave. ne., replied:

"Thank you, dear, but I don't want to live any more—please don't—I want to go. I am ready to go. I want to get on that highway of eternity. It's a very sweet thought, though, dear."

Chills Put Heat on Fuel Men Trying to Fill Their Orders

Chilly citizens have been putting the heat on Washington fuel dealers ever since the thermometer tumbled early this week.

Gas, oil and coal companies yesterday reported an abnormal increase in the number of requests for services. Though things were pretty well bogged down for a few days, most of them expect to have the situation well in hand by the first of the week.

H. B. Noyes, general superintendent of the Washington Gas Light Co., reported that there had been a substantial increase in requests for service in turning on the heat. The company has had to enlarge its telephone facilities, and increase the number of operators to take care of customer calls.

Few Took Early Action

Noyes said that the company sent out letters in mid-August and again in September requesting that customers have heaters turned on before the cold weather set in. As long as the temperature stayed in the 90's, few of them took action, and the cold snap found most of them in heatless houses. With all available men on the job until late at night, the gas company is attempting to get the situation in hand as quickly as possible.

In suburban Virginia and Maryland, gas company officials say there has been a seasonal increase in requests, but no unusual rush. The area, they explain, has fewer homes heated with gas in proportion to its total business than the District.

Fuel oil companies, too, report a sudden rush of demands for immediate service. Typical of their replies was that of Worden W. Reed, general manager of John P. Agnew & Co., who said, "I don't believe I've ever seen a greater rush this early in the season."

Coal, Oil Dealers Busy

Fuel oil dealers usually fill tanks in the spring and early summer, and clean burners during the summer. They explained that most of the calls were from people who wanted burners turned on, though a few had not had burners cleaned and needed double service.

Coal companies, too, are suffering from the sudden rush, though several said the situation was not too bad because it wasn't cold enough. Lewis W. Lawder, manager of Colonial Coal Co., explained that there was an acute shortage of laborers to shovel coal into bins.

Dealers, he said, had asked coal users to get in their winter supply all summer, but consumers all over town are now caught with only one ton of coal.

At the District Building, Kenneth H. Kugel, superintendent of smoke and boiler inspection, said his men were all up to date on their annual inspection of non-residential high and low pressure boilers. They do have a backlog on "permit" jobs—new boilers which have to have a permit before being used.

U. S. to Close Three Resident Halls for Girls

Two residence halls for Government girls in West Potomac Park and another in the Langston Hall project, Oklahoma ave. and 24th st. ne., will be closed Nov. 15, it was announced yesterday.

Nine dormitories, seven at Arlington Farms and two in the Langston Hall project, will continue in operation for Government girls making no more than $2400 yearly who still prefer to live in them.

John C. Junek, manager of the Office of Residence Halls, Public Buildings Administration, said closing of the buildings was necessitated by losses incurred because they were only half-full.

The West Potomac Park halls, he said, listed only 695 tenants on September 23, while their capacity is 1020. Arlington Farms capable of holding 4270 residents, had 2839.

Rentals, Junek said, will stay at $16.50 to $24.50 monthly in the halls remaining open. Girls residing at the closing dormitories may transfer to the others if they wish.

Two buildings will remain open in the Langston Hal project, one for colored student veterans and one for colored feminine Government employes.

Junek said the residence halls paid their own way until July, 1946, when a Government salary increase added $206,000 to the annual operating cost. The increasd expense, plus the dwindling number of tenants, has slowly put the Federal residence halls into thered, Junek said.

Lodge Will Give Scholarship for Citizenship Essay

A $500 college scholarship will be given next fall by the Argo Lodge, B'nai B'rith, to the District public school senior who writes the best essay in a city-wide contest.

The winner will receive the money in two installments, he said, with the second payment conditional on the student's successful completion of the first year's work. The winner my pick his or her own college.

Similar contests will be held in the States represented in the grand lodge: Florida, Georgia, North Carolina, South Carolina and Virginia.

Social Unit Heads Favor Community Chest Merger

Council Members Adopt Idea Subject To 4 Qualifications Including Trial Term

The leadership of 23 member organizations yesterday came out in favor of the parent Council of Social Agenceis merging with the Washington Community Chest.

The approval, voted by delegates to the Council's Recreation Division, was qualified, however, by four provisos:

1. That any merger be for a trial period of two to three years, subject to review and study.

2. That the name of the combined organization "truly imply the main function" of the new agency, community planning. Example: Community Chest and Welfare Planning Council .

3. That adequate representation on the new agency be assured for the five planning divisions of the present Council. These are Recreation, Health, Welfare, Corrections, and Neighborhood Councils.

4. That the executive officer of the new agency be selected for his ability in the field of community welfare planning and budgeting, rather than in the field of fund-raising.

Merger Widely Debated

The question of Chest-Council merger has been up in the air for many weeks, and has been the subject for much debate throughout the city.

The Council of Social Agencies, devoted to community welfare planning, is made up of 102 agencies, public as well as private, grouped into five divisions for coordinating purposes. The Community Chest, a fund-raising league, includes 52 private agencies, virtually all of which are also members of the Council of Social Agencies.

The merger proposal would unite the top leadership of Chest and Council into a single over-all agency. Directing heads of both Chest and Council have okayed the merger plan, but the member agencies themselves must decide the issue.

Action Not Binding

Yesterday's action by the delegates of 23 recreation division members (including 22 Chest-financed units) does not bind the individual organizations, but does indicate the trend of their leaders.

The announcement by the recreation division's executive committee stated that the "previous deadlock" on the question of Council-Chest merger was "en route to solution" as a result of yesterday's action. However, other leaders within Chest and Council pointed out that the setting up of four qualifications to approval created new problems for the already complex issue. The statement was issued by Ernest F. Henry, recreation division chairman.

D. C. Transit Pay Reported Under Average

Washington has fallen "way behind" cities of comparable size in pay scales for transit workers.

The charge was made yesterday by spokesmen for AFL employes of the Capital Transit Co., seeking to back up demands for 35 per cent wage increases.

Washington is now 14½ cents below the "average" in pay for streetcar and bus drivers, a three-man arbitration panel was informed in a hearing at Hotel Raleigh. In 1941, Eli Oliver, counsel for the union, testified, the District was 1½ cents "above average."

Rates Cited in Other Cities

Oliver reported the top scale for drivers in Detroit, Chicago, Seattle and Pittsburgh is $1.42 hourly, while the comparable wage here is $1.20.

At the same time Oliver told the panel, which will resume hearings at 9:30 a. m. Monday, that the cost of living in the District is higher than in other cities with population around the million mark. The other cities, he said, are from 1 to 5 per cent below Washington in living costs.

Introducing a Capital Transit folder published last year as an exhibit designed to show the number of bus and streetcar passengers is expected to grow, Oliver testified that, in spite of recent fare increases, the drop in riders was less this year than the usual seasonal expectancy.

Would Change Holiday Plan

Earlier, Oliver called for a revision in the company's holiday clause, to give employes eight paid holidays yearly. The present plan calls for no work, no pay, on holidays.

The union, covering some 4000 workers, asked that employes who do no work on the eight selected holidays be paid at straight time for a minimum of eight hours. Those who work would be given straight time pay plus holiday pay for the hours worked.

Justice to Observe Rites of Snake Cult

Jonesville, Va., Sept. 26 (AP).—Justice of the Peace Thomas M. Minton said today he would attend a snake-handling religious ceremony on the Kentucky-Virginia line October 12 and would issue a warrant for the arrest of any person he sees handling a snake.

He said that leaders of a snake-handling religious cult had announced plans for such a ceremony on top of Little Black Mountain at the State line between Harlan, Ky., and Pennington Gap, Va. Both States have laws against the handling of snakes as part of religious rites.

"I will enforce the law by issuing a John Doe warrant for anyone I catch handling snakes on the Virginia side of the Kentucky-Virginia line," Minton said. "I appeal to any Kentucky magistrate or other officer to be there to do the same thing if snakes are handled on the Kentucky side."

Bay Oyster Decline Cited At Conference

By Richard L. Lyons
Post Reporter

Solomons, Md., Sept. 26.—The Chesapeake Bay oyster industry, which produced 15 million bushels annually 50 years ago, yielded only two million bushels last year and this year's figure may be still lower.

This was announced today by Dr. R. V. Truitt, founder and director of the Chesapeake Biological Laboratory, here, to members of the Interstate Commission on the Potomac River Basin who are now on a three-day inspection trip of the bay and the Potomac River.

Truitt attributed the decline in production largely to the failure of fishermen to replace shells in the oyster beds. He said tests had shown that baby oysters can be cultivated successfully only in oyster shells. But the demand for shells for road surfacing and for poultry has caused depletion of many once-rich oyster beds in the Bay area.

To show the potential size of the oyster industry, Truitt used comparative figures to illustrate that the meat from 15 million bushels of oysters would equal the weight of 184,000 carcasses of dressed beef or more than the combined beef cattle production of Virginia, West Virginia and Maryland.

A group of 30 commission members and guests left Annapolis this morning on the former presidential yacht Potomac, now the property of the State of Maryland. Tomorrow they are scheduled to make a complete tour of the laboratory where Dr. Truitt for 22 years has been conducting research on all forms of marine life in the Bay area.

In the afternoon they plan to stop at Tangier Island, the little fishing community in the middle of the Bay which is just now receiving electricity. They will examine the mouth of the Potomac for pollution and return to Annapolis Sunday afternoon.

Relatives Seek Settlement of Snyder Estate

The Montgomery County Circuit Court was asked yesterday to settle disposition of the $43,000 estate of Ross H. Snyder, Washington attorney who last November was slain with his wife and foster daughter by his 15-year-old adopted son, Bobby.

Thomas C. Kelley, court appointed administrator of the wife's estate, is plaintiff in the suit which names 15 relatives of the Snyders as defendants. Also listed as plaintiff is the late Mrs. Snyder's mother, Mrs. Margaret R. Russell.

Convicted of the shotgun triple slaying, Bobby is now serving a life sentence in the State Penitentiary at Baltimore. Attorneys said yesterday an appeal filed in his behalf is scheduled for review during the October term of the Maryland Court of Appeals.

The order in which the trio of victims died should determine distribution of the estate, the suit declares. In the bill, Kelley declares the petitioners had been informed that Jane Ann Snyder, 12, the foster daughter was first to die "but we are unable to determine which of the adopted parents survived the other."

If the court finds the girl succumbed first, Kelley said, the estate should go to Mrs. Snyder's mother. In his will, Snyder made his wife sole heir, Kelley said. In the event it should be established that the girl died last, the attorney said, the money should be distributed between relatives of the deceased parents.

The suit asks the court to subpena Bobby for its investigation as well as George A. Hospidor, Washington attorney and administrator of Snyder's estate; Mrs. Rhoda H. Ruddach, Mrs. Snyder's sister of Brookmont, Md., and David Russell, Mrs. Snyder's brother, who is an inmate of Perry Point Veterans Hospital, Perry Point, Md.

The confessed slayer, Bobby, who said he killed the trio in a fit of rage, lost his inheritance by his actions, it was explained.

Canadian's Wife, Refused Soviet Exit, Asks Divorce

Ottawa, Sept. 26 (AP).—The ballerina wife of a Canadian, unable to leave the Soviet Union despite two years of efforts by the Canadian government, has applied to Soviet authorities for a divorce, the External Affairs Department disclosed today.

George F. Power, then in the Canadian Embassy in Moscow, married the ballerina in February 1945. Power was recalled to Canada the following July. Mrs. Power, like the wives of a number of Britons married in Russia during the war, was refused an exit permit.

Between September 1945 and July of this year Canada seven times requested Moscow to grant the visa. In August, Deputy Foreign Minister Andrei Y. Vishinsky said the Russians saw no reason why the question should be raised again.

Arnold Lines Plan Change Of Bus Routes

Extensive changes in bus routes, with service sliced on some runs during nonrush hours, was announced yesterday by the Washington Virginia & Maryland Coach Co. (Arnold Lines).

Principal changes are in traffic between Virginia points, and between Washington and Virginia. Arnold officials said curtailment of some nonrush schedules, and elimination of sections of some routes was caused by poor off-hour patronage.

Changes will become effective on October 1. Washington starting point, except as noted, will still be 11th st. between E and F sts.

Route 1: The 1-F Falls Church and 1-W Westover buses from Washington will operate along Wilson blvd. to Clarendon Circle, then continue up Washington blvd. and return by the same route. 1-F will run on a 15-minute schedule during the day, a 20-minute schedule at night. A 1-W bus will maintain a 15-minute schedule in the morning and afternoon rush hours, leaving 9th and Constitution ave.

The new run eliminates Wilson blvd. from Clarendon Circle to Glebe rd. That area now will be served by buses 1-A, 1-B, 1-D, and 1-H.

Route 2—Direct service on route 2-F to Washington from Falls Church will be maintained at 7:07, 7:37, 8:07 a. m., and return from 10th and F sts. nw. at 4:35, 5:05, and 5:35 p. m. During nonrush hours, passengers will have to transfer at the Clarendon Postoffice for Route 2 connections between Washington and Falls Church.

Route 3—Ten-minute service on 3-D to Lexington st. and Lee hwy. will be maintained, with 20-minute service on 3-F to West Falls Church and 15-minute rush-hour schedule. Route 3-C to Walker Chapel via Lee hwy. will run only during rush hours.

Route 6—Rush-hour service will remain the same, but the line's eastbound midday and evening buses will terminate at Arlington Forest instead of 9th st. and Constitution ave. nw. Passengers can connect with Routes 4-B and 4-D at Arlington Forest for service in Washington.

Route 7—The 6:35 a. m. trip from Oakton to Falls Church will be discontinued.

Route 8—This cross-country run along Glebe rd., formerly operating from 10th and F sts. nw. to Washington blvd. and Glebe rd., will be extended as Route 8-C to Walker Chapel. Transfer points will be at Lee hwy. and Glebe rd. for Route 3, Washington blvd. and Glebe rd. and Wilson blvd. and Glebe rd. for Route 1, Pershing dr. and Glebe rd. for Route 4, Washington blvd. and S. Courthouse rd. to Routes 2, 10, 11, and at Navy Annex to Route 9.

Route 12—Has been substituted by Routes 8 and 11, with trips from Shirlington to Clarendon at 7:20 a. m. and from Clarendon to Shirlington at 4:35 p. m. Monday through Friday.

Cumberland Girl Held for U. S. Jury On Mail Charge

Cumberland, Md., Sept. 26 (AP).—Grace F. Smith, 20-year-old elevator operator in a Cumberland bank building, was held for Federal grand jury action today on charges she mailed threatening letters seeking release of Mark McCauley, condemned slayer of a West Virginia State policeman.

In a hearing before United States Commissioner James Alfred Avirett, postal inspectors said the girl had written threats to M. E. Ketchum, former warden of the West Virginia State Prison at Moundsville.

They quoted the letter as saying: "It was proven McCauley was insane and you better get that paddy wagon and send him back to Keyser for a new trial."

McCauley, a Davis, W. Va., strip miner, has been sentenced to be hanged for the slaying a year ago of State Police Sergt. Joseph Horne and Tucker County Sheriff O. Gay Hovatter, who had arrested him on a charge of stealing a truck.

Montgomery Women Plan Welfare Study

A study of welfare problems confronting Montgomery County will be a major part of the program of the county's League of Women Voters this year.

Plans for the program were outlined yesterday at the annual board membership tea, held at the home of Mrs. Dean Dinwooddy, 6600 Meadow la., Chevy Chase. More than 100 members attended the combined business and social session.

Mrs. Thomas Bartram, first vice president of the league in charge of social walfare, said her group's program would include visits to the State Training School, the County Home and the County Jail; a study of the State's new adoption law as it is now applied in the county's Circuit Court; a study of legislation affecting appointments to the Juvenile Court and efforts to bring more adequate salaries for welfare workers.

Guest speaker at the tea was Miss Helaine Todd, chief of foster homes section of the District Department of Welfare, who indorsed the proposed welfare program.

Miss Todd recommended that the league's welfare committee be established as the course through which the organization can "study, examine and understand the county's welfare agencies and then take action." She termed welfare "community insurance" in urging the group to work toward improved facilities.

Firm Engaged To Modernize City Plans

Employment of Harland Bartholomew Associates of St. Louis to revise and bring up to date the National Park and Planning Commission's plans for the city was announced Thursday.

Employment of the prominent city planning firm is being done under the $75,000 congressional appropriation for the commission to prepare the ground work for carrying out a 20-million-dollar authorization under the Urban Redevelopment Act of 1946. The act requires publication of a comprehensive plan before any projects can be started.

Not all the $75,000 appropriation is to be spent in preparation of the master plan, however, much of it is to be spent in preparation of the blighted areas as indicated by the master plan.

"A great mass of studies, plans and data are available" Maj. Gen. U. S. Grant 3d, commission chairman said, "the accumulation of 14 years since the commission's last annual report was published.

"Where studies of any subject are several years old, the conclusions reached must be reviewed in the light of the latest experience and the last developments in city planning.

"As Br. Bartholomew was the consultant for the Board of District Commissioners in the preparation of the zoning map of the District under the Act of March 1, 1920, and has been city planning and zoning consultant for the commission for 21 years, he has a thorough knowledge of the District and its problems," General Grant said.

Only Four Minutes Needed to Cook Dinner

Four minutes is all you need for cooking a dinner for six if you have a refrigerator, a pressure cooker and half a dozen meat skewers, according to Look magazine. To get under this speedy deadline, vegetables must be peeled and sliced beforehand, and meat cut into cubes.

For a vitamin-rich menu consisting of skewered ham or lamb; cauliflower; diced carrots; frenched string beans (cut lengthwise); and corn on the cob—prepare vegetable and cube meat in 1-inch cubes during afternoon. Place meat cubes on skewers, alternating with slices of pepper, onion, mushrooms, tomato, or pineapple, according to taste.

Just before the family is called in to dinner, place cauliflower and corn in pressure cooker and cook for 2 minutes. Add carrots and string beans and cook all 2 minutes longer—4 minutes in all.

Meanwhile, lay ends of skewers prepared with meat cubes across a tin pan so that meat does not touch pan. Place under broiler and turn frequently. The skewers, becoming hot, cook the inside of the meat cubes, while the flame from the broiler cooks the outside. Broiling takes about 2 or 3 minutes. A portable gas appliance which cooks meat and turns skewers automatically will soon be on the market.

For dessert, serve ice cream which has been stored in the refrigerator. Look recommends combined scoops of strawberry and pistachio, lavishly topped with chocolate sauce. A treat for the whole family, this dessert appeals especially to the sweet tooth of the teen-agers.

Lids Should Be Clean

Don't forget to wash the lids of cooking utensils as carefully as the utensils themselves, as the odor of the dish is likely to cling to the lid and cause it to spoil the next article cooked beneath it.

Making the Bed To Protect Blanket

When making a bed, pull the upper sheet toward the head of the bed so that when the bed is made the sheet is about six inches longer than the blankets and other coverings. Then the sheet can be turned back over the blanket and the blanket and heavier coverings will be protected from soil at the top during the night.

Airing the Mattress

Do not hang the mattress over a line to air it, as this is apt to cause the filling to separate and cause discomfort. Air the mattress flat in the sun, turning so each side may have its share of the warmth.

Baby's Minor Ills Will Correct Themselves

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

A RECENT letter set me to thinking. It had to do with the chance sleeping positions of which a child may become so enamored.

This mother said her baby slept persistently on her back and this had caused the head to flatten one side of the head. Now she sleeps on her stomach and this had tended to flatten one side of the face. Now she feels the child's deformity to be a serious one. As it looks much worse when she holds the child in front of a mirror, she has begun to shun mirrors and is very miserable about it all. She wants help and comfort, so she says.

If the child's nutrition, plus vitamin D, had always been as good as it could be, so that the bones had the proper nutrition, there should be no permanent deformity from any sleeping position. Babies all tend to get flat heads, but at 2 or 3 years of age these round out as nature intended. It is well, of course, not to foster any single position and turning the baby from side to side tends to make for more restful slumber.

As the mother of three and grandmother of six, the idea that the face or the shoulders could be deformed by sleeping on the stomach simply sounds ridiculous to me. It isn't the position, it is something else that needs correction and that is probably food or something related to it.

But what appalled me and set me to thinking was the influence this parent's worry will have upon the child. The probability is that this defect is noticeable to no one but the parents. But by seeing only that, by making a fetish of it, they can brand the child with her difference, trivial as it is.

Polish Mahogany To a Fine Gloss

How often have you been confronted with that blue, smeary look on mahogany furniture and had trouble polishing it satisfactorily? Sponge it first with a cloth dipped in a solution of hot water and vinegar and then with a cloth dipped in a pint of hot warm water to which 1 teaspoon each linseed oil and turpentine have been added. Polish with a dry, soft cloth and the smeary appearance will turn to a nice gloss.

Ask Anne
Your Questions On Homemaking

I am preparing to store my furniture for two years. Can you advise me as to the best preparation I can make especially with respect to mattresses and upholstered furniture, books and solid mahogany furniture.

R. L. S.

Be sure that all the fabrics you are preparing to store are cleaned and are treated to prevent moths. As you know, these pests are most likely to attack soiled materials.

Have your mattress cleaned, or go over it carefully yourself with a vacuum cleaner. Then spray it with a moth preventive or dust naphtha flakes over it generously. Then you may tuck an old sheet over the mattress as a protective covering.

If you do not have your upholstered furniture cleaned give it a thorough going-over with the vacuum cleaner or brush. Then treat it with moth preventives. If you have an old, second best set of slip covers put them on the furniture. If not, you might cover the chairs and sofa with old sheets or other old fabrics. A stitch here and there will help to keep these covers in place and they will prevent dirt from sifting into the good coverings of your furniture.

A good coat of wax will give your fine furniture a protective coating and help prevent scratches. After waxing the furniture wrap the table legs (chair legs, too) in wrapping paper, using cord to tie the wrappings in place. Old quilts, old scatter rugs or such coverings would be good to place on the surface of tables to ward off scratches.

Books should be packed carefully with papers around the covers so that they will not rub together and become defaced. Again, old quilts are useful to be placed between mirrors and pictures to protect the frames and glass. If this is not available use heavy corrugated paper.

In storing household equipment it is practical to store each classification in separate boxes. That is, put your pots, pans and cooking equipment in one container. In another store your bed linens; another box might take your bathroom linens. And other boxes and barrels can take your everyday china and glass, while still others could take your Sunday best. In this way if it should happen that you will need a small amount of your possessions for an apartment, then you could take what you need without going through everything.

Be sure to place a list of the contents on each box or container. After two years you won't be able to remember. One way to keep these lists is to make them as you pack and then when you have finished attach the list with Scotch tape or glue to the box.

I thought some of the "Ask Anne" readers who have been having trouble with musty odors in upholstery might be interested in knowing about a method I've been using successfully for some time. I spray the upholstery with the "liquid frost" type of moth-proofing preparation. You can buy it at almost any of the department stores, and it certainly kills those musty odors.

Women of CFC Study Needs Of Starving

Already in Europe when she was appointed to President Truman's 26-man Citizens Food Committee, Mrs. J. L. Blair Buck, energetic head of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, will have a chance to study starving conditions abroad at first hand.

A member of the United States delegation to the first International Assembly of the Women's World Fellowship, opening in Paris tomorrow, Mrs. Buck will remain on the Continent for about a week following the assembly's close.

Mrs. Buck has been spending several days in London, where she presented Princess Elizabeth with the GFWC's wedding gift—an appliqued Madeira organdy tablecloth and napkins.

Miss Anna Lord Strauss, the other woman member of the CFC, is at present on a field trip for the National League of Women Voters, of which she is president. In a letter directed to President Truman, Senator Arthur Vandenberg and Speaker Joseph Martin before she left Monday, Miss Strauss, who served on last year's Famine Emergency Committee, urged immediate action for emergency aid to Europe and for machinery to curb domestic inflation.

Visiting Women's Voters' leagues in Oklahoma, Texas and Louisiana, Miss Strauss plans to be away about six weeks. In Dallas she will preside at an area conference on international trade in connection with the league's new Nation-wide educational effort to awaken interest in world trade.

Savory Beans Answer for Meat

HAIL to the Navy bean—a fine and filling food for families cooperating with the President's campaign against food wastes!

Savory and succulent, beans rate as a protein that can alternate for meat, especially when dressed up as pictured above. Canned beans were used in these easy-to-fix dishes. The recipes follow:

BEANS WITH BACON

1 small onion
1 teaspoon prepared mustard
6 strips crisp bacon

Combine beans, chopped onion, and mustard. Put in baking dish and bake in a moderate oven (350°F) about an hour. Serve with strips of crisp bacon on top each serving. (Serves six.)

BEANS WITH SAUSAGE AND RELISH SAUCE

1 4-ounce can Vienna sausage
½ cup mayonnaise
1 teaspoon chopped onion
1 tablespoon chopped pickle
1 teaspoon chopped parsley

Empty beans into a shallow baking dish. Arrange sausages on top. Combine remaining ingredients and spread over the top. Bake, uncovered, in a moderate oven (350°F) about 30 minutes. (Makes three servings.)

BAKED BEANS WITH DEVILED EGGS

2 1-pound cans baked beans
6 deviled eggs
1 sweet pickle, or tiny pickled onions

Empty beans into a baking dish. Press deviled eggs into the beans. Garnish with pickle strips, or onions. Cover, and bake in a moderate oven (350°F) about an hour. (Serves six.)

Chest Agency Lights Way for Blind

Washington's blind have an understanding friend in Miss Stella Plants.

When they find their way to her desk as supervisor of the Department of the Blind of the Family Service Association, they do not have to explain their handicap in making a living, getting along with sightless eyes. She knows. She has been blind all her life.

Her agency, which is one of the Red Feather services supported by Community Chest, has 1200 blind persons, young and old, on its roll.

She has a staff of two case workers and a teacher. Case work comes first, she says. A man newly blind may be bitter and desperate, without ambition or hope. It is the case worker's job to free him emotionally. Unless he can face and accept his handicap and go forward in spite of it, all the special resources which the community offers the blind are valueless to him.

So it is the function of skilled workers in the Department for the Blind of the Family Service Association to visit the man and his family and help him to make the difficult adjustment, using all the understanding they have acquired through long experience with the blind.

In trying to explain how this is done, Miss Plants told the story of a man who had always been the dominant factor in his family. He had been able to make a good living. His wife was the sheltered type and completely dependent on him. She had never worked outside the home, and now suddenly their roles were reversed. He was blind, unable to find his way about or earn a living. She was thrust into the world to try and support the family.

Blind Can Still Work

Her chagrin, her bewilderment, a reversal of roles, jeopardized the whole fabric of married life. But through a case worker, the man was brought out of his bitter dejection. He found he could still work—not the same job but another almost as good. And the woman learned to take more responsibility and stand on her own feet.

The Washington Post
MISS STELLA PLANTS
. . . The blind's friend

The case worker, Miss Plants said, is followed into the home by the teacher, after the blind person has been sufficiently prepared to receive her. She teaches him personal grooming and how to find his way about.

Try combing your hair with your eyes closed. Attempt to manicure your nails, shave, tie your tie, or do the dozens of other things a man or woman must do to step out in the morning neatly attired and ready to face the world.

Close your eyes and wander about your house. You'll find yourself stumbling and falling, even if you thought you knew where everything was placed.

The simplest tasks of everyday living become real problems to the newly blind. And it is through these adjustments that Miss Plants and her assistants lead blind people through the dark byways of physical and mental anguish into the light.

They can do more than this. Through knowledge of the people who come to them, they are prepared to interpret the needs of the blind to the public, to awaken an understanding of their difficulties and a willingness to cooperate in making them self-sufficient human beings.

There is no use in training a blind person for a job, Miss Plants explained, if the community refuses to give him one after he is ready to take it.

Her department has an education service, too, which is important to the visually handicapped. All the resources for the blind are listed there. Such resources are essential, so many avenues open to other people are closed to them.

Community Must Help

For example, landlords shun the responsibility of having a blind person in their rooms. Similarly, homes for the aged, homes for children, and other institutions which help most people, hesitate or refuse to take the blind.

When a blind person has advanced to the point where a particular resource will help him, Miss Plants directs him to it, not before.

Jobs for the blind or retraining for those able to take it can be secured through the D. C. Vocational Rehabilitation Service and also through the Washington Society for the Blind.

The Congressional Library has a service for the blind, with hundreds of books in Braille. The D. C. Association for the Blind distributes the Talking Book Machines provided by the Government for those who need them.

These are some of the ways in which the Department for the Blind of the Family Service Association, located at 1022 11th st. nw., is prepared to help blind people. Each year, Miss Plant says, their file of blind persons is brought up to date and every person is contacted with an offer of service.

Slim on the 10-Day Schedule

Three Moderate Meals a Day Will Help You Wear The 'New Look' Fashions

By Ida Jean Kain

SQUARE MEALS don't make round waists. It's overeating to belt-bulging proportions that does that. Figures prove it. The overweights who skip breakfast, "diet" at lunch and eat all they can hold at dinner . . . stay overweight and usually have apple-dumpling contours. Naturally they do not welcome the new slim-waisted fashion.

It's the top-heavy dinner that is causing the biggest part of the trouble. Calories are burned according to the demand of the muscles for energy, not according to the amount of food eaten. And what happens to extra food? It is stored . . . around the waist, first.

When you take the bulk of the day's calories in one big evening meal, here's what goes on . . . the extra starch and sugar calories (carbohydrates) are tucked away in the liver as glycogen, and to a small extent in the muscles for ready energy. But when the liver can't take more and the muscles are packed, the incoming carbohydrates are chemically changed into the more solid form of fat and packed away. On top of this, all the unused calories in the form of delectable food fats go straight to waist.

Proteins to Reduce

It's a different story with protein foods. When protein is eaten in excess it tends to burn itself off because of its stimulating effect and because the body does not have much capacity for storing large amounts of protein. Of course, an excess can be burned for energy, but protein is not as "fattening" as carbohydrates and fats owing to its dynamic action. For every 100 calories of protein eaten, you actually burn 130 to 140 calories. And that is the reason the scientifically planned reducing diets are kept fairly high in protein.

But back to that big dinner. A bad feature is that it comes at the end of the day's activity when there is little demand made on the muscles for energy. Walking from the dining table to an easy chair isn't much effort, and across the room to dial your favorite radio program, or from the car to the movies. And after that it's time to go to bed, and we burn fewer calories during sleep than at any other time.

Well, there it is. You can see why you can't streamline on one big meal a day. To be normal weight, and slim-in-the-middle, eat three moderate meals a day, with each meal built around a complete protein food. On that plan you burn the calories for energy and store fewer as fat. What's more, you'll be fit.

The new waist-whittling diet will help you to lose 5 pounds in 10 days, or 10 pounds in 20 days.

Reception at Legation Marks 'New Zealand Day'

THE New Zealand Legation was the scene of a reception yesterday, when the Minister and Lady Berendsen entertained in observance of New Zealand Day. September 26, 1907, is the day New Zealand was raised from status as a colony to that of a self-governing Dominion in the British Commonwealth of Nations.

The Minister and Lady Berendsen, who had come down from New York for the occasion, received in the handsome grey and gold drawing room of the Legation. In the dining room drinks were served with turkey and ham, buffet style, along with special New Zealand sandwiches called "Toheroa" and "Whitebait."

An important ceremony took place before the reception hours. On behalf of His Majesty the King, the Minister conferred the Orders of the British Empire on two Americans, Miss Nola Luxford and Col. Lawrence Westbrook, in recognition of outstanding war work in World War II. Investiture of the same Order was also announced for Maj. Gen. Louis E. Woods, USMC, of Santa Ana, Calif., who was unable to attend the ceremony.

Miss Luxford was the founder of the Anzac Club in New York City, a club which provided recreation for thousands of New Zealand servicemen during the war. The citation read that her "voluntary work was an outstanding contribution to the welfare of New Zealand servicemen in the United States."

Colonel Westbrook served as president of the United States Joint Purchasing Board, established in June, 1942. "The amicable relations which existed between the officers of the Joint Purchasing Board and the New Zealand government," it was cited," were largely due to the efforts made by Colonel Westbook to ensure the smooth working of the procurement organization."

General Woods was honored for his activities as Chief of Staff to the Commanding General, First Marine Air Wing, on Guadalcanal in 1942.

The citations were read by Air Commodore J. L. Findlay, Air Attache of the Legation.

Elizabeth Sets Style For Brides

In June, 1941, glamour girl Brenda Frazier chose a simple short-sleeve, square-necked satin dress for her wedding and set a new trend in bridal fashions. This fall and winter, according to New York designers, the wedding gown of Princess Elizabeth will create equal interest.

A reasonable prediction is that the gown Norman Hartnell has designed for the Princess to wear on November 20 will be patterned after that worn by her great-great-grandmother, Queen Victoria. Meanwhile, the conjecture has inspired several American designers in the collections they are now showing in New York.

Show Victorian Style

One house shows a decidedly Victorian bridal dress of white satin, its beautifully full skirt belled out over a hoop and divided low in the center front to drape away from tiers of finely-pleated net inserts. Intricate pearl and bead embroidery on one side of the snug, long-sleeved bodice is garlanded into the skirt, which is round in shape and roundly trained.

Another style, designed especially for the young bride, is the trainless, full-skirted ballet type dress. Except for this difference in length, such dresses are usually traditional in effect, made of creamy satin with long slim sleeves and moulded bodices. An exception is a quaint picture dress of ice blue satin with short puffed sleeves and bertha collar of net embroidered over like lace with fine braid, sequins and pearls.

Satin Still Leads

Satin is more than ever the leading fabric for bridal dresses. It may be white, cream, ice blue or ice pink, depending on the bride's preference. In addition, most New York designers are using yards and yards of delicate looking laces, a wonderful new marquisette as strong as it is sheer, and cloudlike white velvet. One designer shows a white velvet dress with square-yoke, long-sleeved bodice and full-gathered trained skirt hooped underneath near the hem.

Bridesmaids will look more colorful this year. Reason is that different tones of the same color are again plentiful in such materials as taffetas, marquisettes and bengalines. Pinks from pale to American beauty; blues from sky to turquoise and yellows from maize to gold.

Iowa Dance Tonight

All Iowans and their friends are invited to attend the Iowa State Society dance scheduled for tonight in the west ballroom of the Shoreham. In addition to dancing, card games will be played. Mrs. Gertrude Bowman is chairman of the hostess committee. Additional information may be obtained from the secretary, Miss Gertrude Louis, Decatur 0800.

Making Old Skirts Into New

Down With Last Year's Hemline

Net or lace band at hem-line. Matching cuff.

Wide lame lastex belt on dressy suit or dress.
Scalloped contrasting midriff—collar and cuff.

Fur band and buttons on coat.

Practical Suggestions . . . On the Ups and Downs of the Hemline Question

By Peggy Preston

HOW to make 'em longer?

That's the question that is causing women to wail and gnash their teeth whenever they pull last year's knee length dress out of the closet. Because, despite what side they've taken in the hemline war, most of them will want longer dresses this winter. Surveys show that all but a handful intend to play along with the new vogue.

But only a foolish few are even considering discarding their old clothes and buying a new wardrobe. No woman with half a brain means to toss out a perfectly good suit or dress just because it is a little short. She's just going to let the hem down a couple of inches.

However, that isn't as simple as it sounds. Hemlines have been skimpy in recent years and many wartime clothes were made with no hem allowance at all. So the $64 question is what else can be done to lengthen a garment besides letting out the hem.

MOST successful answer is found in the waistband or corselet idea. A suit skirt, for instance, may be lengthened by adding a wide piece of contrasting material at the waist. In the case of a two-piece dress, where the jacket covers the top of the skirt, a simple band of facing, net or any other material will do the trick.

For the one-piece dress a more elaborately planned waistband is needed. A dress can be quite fashion-right, with a nipped-in look, if you add a wide fitted band between the bodice and skirt.

Wide lame lastex is being used for dressy cocktail dresses, suede or knit yarn for woolens and sports wear. Colors may be either the same or contrasting.

The effect of such treatment is to drop the top of the skirt over the hipline and add several inches to the length of the skirt.

IF THIS method fails, next best bet is a ruffle or pleated band around the hem itself. Lots of the new clothes have this treatment. It is easy to match black crepe, for instance, have it pleated stitched to the hem of that afternoon dress which always had a tendency to slip up over your knees, anyhow. Another idea is to add a band of matching net to the hem and finish the dress off with collar and cuffs of the same material.

Coats are apt to be the biggest problem, as in heavy materials old hemline marks have a nasty habit of remaining. Some may like to add a band of fur at the bottom. But if this is too expensive the next best thing is to hem it up to three-quarter length.

If you are fortunate enough to have ample hems in your clothes your problem is practically solved for you. Facing materials are available at most local stores and may be had in colors to match your dress. One good way to erase the effect of the old hemline mark is to stitch the facing along the telltale mark itself. Try it, it looks just like an ordinary hemline.

Mothers Must Do Mending—But It Needn't Be Irksome Chore

"WHEN I married, I warned my husband that I detested mending, that whatever he did about the holes in his socks and the buttons off his shirts when he was a bachelor, he'd have to continue as a benedict," one mother told us recently.

"But when the children arrived," she continued, "I couldn't escape. Our budget would take a worse beating than it does these days if I did not repair the damage that tumbles off tricycles, falls in the play yard and hasty trips around corners do to the clothes of my impulsive youngsters."

We've heard of a few women who find mending a soothing pastime, but we know more who find it an irksome chore. "It isn't that it's hard work," these complain, "it's just so dull. And when you're finished, what do you have? Something new and lovely and beautiful? Definitely not."

YOU can have, however, the satisfaction of knowing you've lengthened the life of another garment and that the total salvage job adds up to a tidy sum when you count the cost of replacements.

Since mend we must, let's make it as painless as possible.

If you are an enthusiastic seamstress, you may have a sewing center in your home. If you haven't, now is the time to organize one that will meet your needs.

It may be a small room equipped with sewing machine, cutting table, dress form, mirror and all the other equipment for major clothing construction operations, but if mending is the extent of your sewing, it may be a comfortable chair in a good light, with a sewing table, cabinet, box or basket to hold your equipment.

The comfortable chair and the good light are not prescriptions to be taken lightly, because one virtue of mending is that it can be a restful job.

A 5-pound candy box, one of those big wooden cheese boxes you can sometimes buy or beg from your grocer or a shoe bag kind of kit made of denim, oilcloth, cretonne or chintz are good containers for sewing supplies.

Don't waste time mending clothes that are too worn to be worth saving.

Reinforce thin places before they break through.

Attend to dangling snaps, hooks, eyes and buttons, small rips, loose threads and raveled seams promptly.

Mend garments before they go to the laundry to prevent further ripping or raveling.

Use mending tape that is ironed on the garment to save time. Read the label on the package before you buy to see whether the tape will withstand washing or dry cleaning.

Use the sewing machine for greater speed and stronger reinforcement.

Do hand mending when it is more convenient, when you want softer, more pliable, less conspicuous repairs.

Use chain stitches for inconspicuous mends on baby sweaters and other knitted fabrics.

Use the buttonhole stitch to sew on hooks and eyes, and snaps to make them secure for the life of the garment.

Use a thread shank when sewing on buttons to avoid strain.

Have a regular plan for collecting in one spot garments that need mending, so that when you have a moment to do a little, you can quickly pick up a piece and subtract one item from the pile.

DO your mending while you listen to a radio program, visit or have someone who will read a current best-seller aloud to you.

If you are really skilled with the needle, the following budget stretchers may appeal to you:

Those bath towels with the broken selvedge edges will make terrycloth bathrobes for the children.

Old white shirts, worn sheets, can make slips and panties for the young.

Skirts from house dresses that have given way under the arms will make up into rompers and pinafores and sun suits.

Adult outing-flannel nightgowns and pajamas can be cut over into small-sized sleepers.

Old gloves, handbags and worn felt hats can supply sturdy patches for knees and elbows of snow suits.

Woodward's To Refinance 7% Pf. Stock

By S. Oliver Goodman

Stockholders of Woodward & Lothrop, Inc., will vote October 20 on a proposed increase of $500,000 in authorized capital stock. Ultimate object is to refinance 7 per cent preferred stock to a 4 per cent dividend rate.

In a letter to stockholders mailed yesterday afternoon, the board of trustees said the plan contemplates a recapitalization from the present $4,500,000 to $5,000,000. Authorized preferred stock would be increased from $2,000,000 to $2,500,000.

At present the Washington department store has 20,000 shares of 7 per cent cumulative preferred stock outstanding. The plan, if adopted, would give these preferred holders the right to convert into new 4 per cent preferred stock of $100 par value at the rate of 1¼ shares of new preferred for each share of old preferred. The conversion period would be from March 18, 1948, to June 15, 1948.

Provisions have been made for scrip to take care of fractional exchanges.

The $500,000 increase in capital would be accomplished by the transfer of that amount from the corporation's surplus to capital account. The plan also calls for the redemption at $105 a share of any 7 per cent preferred shares not converted into the new 4 per cent preferred stock by August 1, 1948.

Philosophical Clown

A New Chaplin In a Rare Film

By Richard L. Coe

CHARLIE CHAPLIN'S "Monsieur Verdoux" is a bold, brilliant and bitterly amusing film.

Probably a lot of people aren't going to enjoy "Monsieur Verdoux," but, like a work of real character, that is almost beside the point. It is certainly one of the few Hollywood pictures of recent years that will set people thinking and arguing.

For this is both a comedy and an exercise in philosophy. As a comedy it has many sequences of hilarious fun. As a discussion on why life is as it is, it is certainly provocative, though its conclusion may be disheartening or unclear.

This new Chaplin is elegant, urbane and quite a different fellow from the waif of his previous comedies. Certainly he is entitled to create and play such a fellow without setting up the wails of those who would prefer that he run through his familiar bag of tricks.

You first hear his voice from a cemetery telling you about his life. He had been a bank clerk for 30 years when a depression came along and blew him out of his job. He'd been a good, honest worker and found himself without means to support his wife and young son.

So he took to murder. Not simple thuggery, mind you, but a shrewd business of marrying women of some means, putting them quietly to death and pocketing their easily negotiable wealth. The job kept him hopping, but eventually he paid with his life for his crimes, but not until after he had wakened from his insanity. The forces of law caught up with him only by many. What is wrong with a world the merest chance.

The questions he suggests are which will reward years of honest work with cruel emptiness? Why should murder on a comparatively small scale be criminal but war on a vast panorama be permitted? These are but two of them.

Questions and Slapstick

There is nothing original in pondering such questions, but for the movies to do so is rare. He is asking little more than have philosophers throughout history, but film comedy with such questions gives them a fresh twist.

And there are some wonderfully comic moments in "Monsieur Verdoux." There is the slapstick humor of Martha Raye, playing Verdoux's only indestructible wife, a laughing hulk of a female who won her money in a lottery and has had good luck ever since. There is an elegant garden party where the perspiring bridegroom is forced to run from his own wedding. There are chases, falls and all the grand old tricks that have been funny since man started laughing.

But the sly things are the wittiest: Chaplin counting money, waiting for his rose garden while the body of a rich wife goes up in smoke in a nearby incinerator, being aided by the one near-victim he had pity on, a pretty girl who has become the mistress of a munitions manufacturer.

And when the end nears, Chaplin is still questioning—for rarely does he come out with a didactic statement. Instead he simply asks, "Why?" or "Why not?" In his cell, just before his execution, a priest comes to see him, as a solace? "May the Lord have mercy on your soul," prays the priest.

Then, with no disrespect to the cloth, but as one human being to another, Chaplin replies: "Why not? It belongs to Him."

Acts With His Eyes

Combining such unusual film thought with out-and-out slapstick is certainly something few have either the ability or the courage to try. That it comes off as well as it does is proof to Chaplin's movie mastery. As an actor he is superb in the role, doing more with his eyes than any other current Hollywood player.

The rest of his company is generally effective, particularly Miss Raye, Isobel Elsom (as a near victim) and Ada-May as the maid who mistakes a bottle of poison for peroxide hair rinse.

Not only did Chaplin do the screenplay (from an idea of Orson Welles) and the direction, he wrote an amusing score for the film, with a reminiscent and neatly lilting tune for the Paris boulevards.

All in all, "Monsieur Verdoux" is great in its aim and orginal in its field. What flaws it has are minor technicalities that amount to little in so rare a project. And if its macabre humor disturbs you—well, life is like that.

Its simultaneous opening yesterday at the Pix, Apex, Atlas, Naylor and Senator theaters, by the way, is the first time this city has followed that custom, one that is increasingly popular throughout the country.

TOMORROW: Richard L. Coe reviews a new book by Edith J. R. Isaacs, "The Negro in the American Theater."

"MONSIEUR VERDOUX." United Artists release of a Charles Chaplin production. Based on an idea by Orson Welles, with screenplay, music and direction by Chaplin. At the Pix, Apex, Atlas, Naylor and Senator theaters.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Rankin Makes Hay During Hurricane

By Drew Pearson

It's an ill wind that blows nobody good, according to Congressman John Rankin of Mississippi, now running like a jackrabbit for the Senate seat of the late Theodore Bilbo.

Rankin

The potentate of Tupelo has now stooped so low as to make political hay of the hurricane and the devastation it brought to his home State.

Sunday, Rankin stayed glued to the radio in his Washington apartment, carefully noting the places damaged by floods and wind.

By noon he had a sizable list of stricken Mississippi towns. Thereupon he prepared a press release demanding that the President call Congress into special session to aid the storm victims.

Not content with giving this to the press associations, Rankin telegraphed the statement to key newspapers in Mississippi.

In addition, he wired the mayors of Mississippi towns, telling them of his demand on the White House.

Monday, the ingenious gentleman from Mississippi went even further. He asked for an appointment with President Truman to register his demand for a special session. Truman, however, had just stepped off the boat from Rio, had already scheduled conferences with the Cabinet and Food Committee. So Rankin was informed by phone that Truman had ordered proper Government agencies to take appropriate steps to help the flood areas.

All this was grist to Rankin's mill. Although he voted against almost every Truman measure in Congress, John immediately wired Mississippi newspapers, giving the impression that hurricane aid was forthcoming only because he, John Rankin, was on the job in Mississippi's hour of stress.

No wonder Rankin is telling friends that the hurricane will blow him right into the Senate.

Note — Rootin'-tootin' John now is so confident of filling Bilbo's seat that he thinks he may not even go home to campaign.

Loves Punishment

Pugnacious Senator Homer Ferguson doesn't seem to mind asking for punishment. Unrelenting as a bulldog once he sinks his teeth in a senatorial probe, the shaggy-maned Michigan Republican recently proclaimed that he would go through with his original plans for the Howard Huges hearings in November. Well-wishing friends, remembering how the first probe had backfired, tried to persuade him against it.

"I postponed that hearing until November 17," thundered Homer, "and I will go ahead with it November 17 even if Congress goes into a special session the same day!"

Britain's Exit

The State Department is frequently accused of being the tail on the kite of British foreign policy. This was decidedly not the case, however, when the Senate Appropriations Committee met in a closed-door session with State and War Department officials to consider who will pay British occupation costs in Germany.

It is already known that the British have served notice they will need help in financing their zone in Germany. But what is not known is that the State Department presented an array of figures in the secret session showing that the British are better off then generally realized.

Though the British are short of dollars, they are not short of sterling and many German occupation costs can be paid out of sterling. British industries, including coal and utilities, actually are above prewar production, the State Department told Senators. Box-car loadings have also surpassed prewar standards.

It was also revealed that the British employ 18,000 civilians to run their part of Germany, while the United States employs only 5000.

These figures were one reason for the unanimous opinion of the Senate Appropriations Committee that if we have to shoulder part of Britain's occupation costs, we in turn must get a share in fixing British policy.

Too Many Vishinskys

Sprightly Senator Young (R., N. Dak.) dropped some remarks about the strike of Italian farm workers and the fact that it would cost the United States millions more for Italian relief.

"The trouble over there," interrupted Wyoming's pert Senator Joe O'Mahoney, "is that there are a lot of little Vishinskys running around telling Italian labor what to do."

"As I understand it," said O'Mahoney, "by helping the British out in Germany, we are trying to stimulate production of coal in the Ruhr. And by our success in Germany, we can provide coal for the rest of Europe. This in turn will help France, Italy and Britain to speed up their own production."

Nodding approval, Senator Saltonstall scribbled on a piece of paper and handed it to his Democratic colleague from Wyoming. It read: "As Mayor Hylan's wife said to the Queen of the Belgians, 'You said a mouthful, Queen'."

Note—Following the Senate Appropriations Committee's session, the State and War Departments prepared a 1500-word memo for President Truman, summarizing the problem of financing the British in Germany. It stated that the Senate would go along with the appropriations of funds to cover food, fertilizer and such items as Britain must pay for in dollars. Meanwhile, it is understood that the British will not withdraw their troops, and that the USA would share in fixing policies for the British zone.

Four Charged In Dredging Of Oysters

Waldorf, Md., Sept. 26 (AP).—Arrest of four oystermen on charges of illegal fishing operations in the Wicomico River was disclosed tonight by Maryland State Police at Waldorf.

They said the men were taken into custody after a raid by State police, Charles County police and inspectors of the Tidewater Fisheries Commission.

Charged with dredging oysters while operating a power boat were Jerry Gibson, John F. Oliver, Thomas E. Bailey and Paul M. Bailey, all residents of St. Mary's County.

All the dredging, police said, took place on Charles County waters late in the afternoon.

Dry Ice Fails To Bring Rain To Staunton

Staunton, Va., Sept. 26 (AP).—Bombing cumulus clouds with dry ice isn't the solution to Staunton's summer time drinking water problem.

That much became evident when news leaked out at city hall here yesterday that the oft-projected method was tried secretly last week and just didn't work.

City Manager W. Guy Ancell, whose idea it was to try the method of inducing precipitation to raise the water level in the city's North River dam, thus saving the $300,000 an additional reservoir would cost, had no comment to make. But Staunton air service operator H. A. Grimm, jr., admitted that he tried the idea out last week. Except for what Grimm termed "some precipitation" nothing happened.

It didn't rain—at least on the ground where the water was needed. Grimm says he climbed to 14,000 feet in his three-place plane and dumped 50 pounds of dry ice, pulverized with the aid of a municipal steam roller, into a likely looking cloud. Then he flew under the cloud to see what was happening. Nothing was happening.

Ancell, whose friends have been calling him "Mr. "Rain-In-the-Face," had nothing to say, except to quote what an elderly man told him a few days ago in a barber shop: "You'd better leave God's work alone and straighten out the traffic mess in Staunton."

Frederick Police Officer Faces Charges

Frederick, Md., Sept. 26.—Charges of conduct unbecoming an officer were filed against Police Lieut. Frank K. Dorsey with the Police Commission late yesterday. Specific allegations, however, were not released by the Police Commission. Dorsey, who is in night command of the department, refused comment. Charges were preferred, it was learned, by Ernest Brecht, a neighbor of Dorsey.

Dorsey, who has been a member of the police force for more than a decade, is the third ranking officer of the department to be charged before the Police Commission. Chief Frederick M. Straley was officially absolved of dereliction of duty charges by the commission in a report filed with the Board of Aldermen Wednesday night.

Cocharged was Lieut. Reno O. Cox, who is scheduled to stand charing at a commission meeting next Monday night.

Manuel M. Weinberg, attorney for Police Sergt. Daniel Swomley, who preferred the charges against Straley and Six, has objected to the hearing procedure. He has requested that the hearing for Six be postponed until a ruling can be secured from the attorney general defining the proper procedure.

Tuck Calls Budget Requests Of Va. Institutions 'Appalling'

Charlottesville, Va., Sept. 26 (AP).—Governor Tuck and his touring budget makers left here tonight for Richmond, ending a two-week tour of State institutions with the remark that budget requests, amounting to $38,222,000 for maintenance and operation plus $71,229,000 in capital outlays, had been "appalling."

"They're appalling because the requested funds are so badly needed in most cases," Tuck said. "Requests will have to be pruned very sharply before a budget bill is submitted."

The last request of the 32 agencies and institutions was made by Colgate W. Darden, jr., president of the University of Virginia, who asked for a general fund appropriation of $3,144,085 for 1948-50, representing a 34 per cent increase.

The university president requested a capital outlay of $6,199,450, in addition to the reappropriation of some five million dollars in construction authorized by the General Assembly.

In submitting his budget requirements, the former Governor told the Budget Commission that some means must be found for raising the general intelligence level of the population.

"I see two measures which could be taken along this line," Darden declared. "One is the expansion of our extension service, and we are asking more than $344,000 for this field in 1938-50—a 50 per cent increase over current appropriations.

"The second measure toward raising the general intellectual level would be the establishment of the development of intermediate colleges—satellite institutoins for the State's major universities—which would offer only two years of college training. But they should be two good years, not two trifling years."

Earlier in the day, State Health Commissioner L. J. Roper appeared before the Governor and his Budget Board to ask for a new $2,500,000 tuberculosis hospital in the Richmond area, designed to house some 300 Negro patients.

The request was submitted as part of a $7,500,000 tuberculosis program that Dr. Roper said would raise the State's bed capacity from 1039 to 1620.

Dr. Frank B. Stafford, superintendent of the Blue Ridge Sanatorium, asked for $1,056,252 for maintenance and operation in 1948-50, an increase over the current fiscal period of $472,910.

New Pamphlet Records Varied Maryland Data

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 26 (AP).—A new pamphlet with the State flag, seal, song, flower, bird and tree illustrations and a short history of Maryland was ready for distribution today by the Secretary of State.

New additions to the pamphlet, frequently requested by students and hobbyists, are the picture of the Wye oak, owned by the State, which represents the white oak, one of the Baltimore oriole. The oriole was long called the official bird, but it was not legally designated so until the 1947 session of the Legislature.

Va. Gas Distribution Hearing Set Oct. 7

Richmond, Va., Sept. 26 (AP).—The State Corporation Commission has set for hearing at 2 p. m., on October 7, a petition of Virginia Gas Distribution Corp. asking an amendment to its regulations limiting gas used for space heating purposes.

The corporation has its main offices in Staunton and serves an area that includes that city as well as Waynesboro, Clifton Forge and Covington. Its request was made because of inability to obtain facilities such as pipe and pumping equipment, which, it said, makes it unable to provide additional gas to new consumers in the State.

W.-M. Enrollment Reaches New High

Williamsburg, Va., Sept. 26 (AP).—An increase of 200 students over last year's capacity enrollment has been registered at the College of William and Mary for the 1947-48 session, Dr. John E. Pomfret, president told the 155th annual autumn convocation in Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall today.

"The college had to choose between the risk of countless minor irritations or deny a number of qualified students the opportunity of study," Dr. Pomfret said. "Not to have admitted as many as possible would have been indefensible," he declared.

We Almost Had Another Story About a Wayward Bus!

Ronald Van Tine was en route to his job at the United Press office the other morning, when his Arnold bus driver stopped to buy a morning paper.

It was the day we carried that story about a robot plane flying the ocean. The driver read the item in silence, and then addressed himself to his startled passengers:

"How about this? Now they've got airplanes flying across the ocean with nobody at the controls. How would you like it if we sent this bus across Highway Bridge with nobody at the controls?"

And while the idea simmered back through the bus, the driver contentedly settled himself in his seat and resumed his route—the old-fashioned way.

WOULD IT, LIZ?

Regardless of the relative merits of long vs. short dresses, Clayton Stanley of 211 Leighton ave., Silver Spring, Md., muses:

"Would it be appropriate to say that the longer dresses will cover a multitude of shins?"

OUR TIMES, IN RHYME

Portrait of a man
Being thrifty.
His weekly pass
Is just one-fifty.

Charlene E. Olsson of 652 Newton pl. nw. is moved to the retort:

Portrait of a man
Hot under the collar.
His weekly pass
Used to be a dollar.

And that gives me the last word in this tiff, with the thought:

But that holds true
For all we buy.
So don't be blue,
Or sob, or cry.

'Cause some sweet day,
When prices tumble
They'll cut our pay
And we'll STILL grumble.

COMPLAINT DEPT.

"Speaking of animal crackers," says Mrs. Dorothy Loughrey of 1223 Pleasant st. se., "I have a complaint to register.

"Either they make them too small, or my baby's mouth is too big. When I hand her an animal cracker, she pops the whole thing into her mouth."

Truly a problem, Mrs. L. But the company would probably defend its product by saying that there's nothing wrong with the size—the crackers are just so delicious that the kids can't restrain themselves.

SUGGESTION

Wonder how come the billboard and advertising people have overlooked the possibilities of using the ceilings of barber shops?

(If anybody cashes in on the idea, he can thank our old friend Neal L. Boykin of 820 Kentucky ave. se.)

ADD SIGNS

When the sign was erected in the exclusive northwest development it read, "Kent, Community of Character."

Some wag has added an "s" to the last word.

Wayne Coy, head man at WINX, returns from a radio convention in Atlantic City with another sign for our collection.

It appears on the doors of Soloff's Restaurant, on the Boardwalk, and says:

"Closed—Sorry. We're So Tired."

UPS & DOWNS

Mrs. Woodward Burke of 1345 19th st. nw. passes along a story which sister Mary tells.

Mary works at Union Station, dishing out Pullman space. The other night she waited on a Chinese customer who stopped her for a moment with a request for:

"One upper and one higher, please."

Grin and Bear It

"It took a total stranger sitting behind me to notice the new hat that my own husband doesn't even know I have on!"

Leonard Lyons

Famous Last Words, by H. G. Wells

NEW YORK.—In the last hours of H. G. Wells' life, two faithful friends took turns in attending him. The first was a baroness; the second was Rebecca West, the novelist. Miss West's was the final turn. She watched him breathing heavily, trying to say something. He summoned his declining strength, mentioned the name of a noted American columnist and asked her: "Do you know him?" . . . Miss West nodded and said: "Yes, I know him."

Wells breathed heavily again. Then the greatest living man in English letters summoned the rest of his strength, said: "Preposterous idiot, isn't he?" and died.

WORRY: Stephen Bekassy, flew to Rome Tuesday to appear in the movie, "Cagliostro," tells of two refugees who escaped from Germany just before the war, and one of them managed to obtain a British visa. When the war ended they were reunited, and the one who had gone to England reported: "I became a subject of His Majesty. As soon as I arrived I established a chemical plant and was fortunate. I have a town house in Mayfair, a country home in Essex and a castle in Scotland. Both my daughters are now happily married to men in the diplomatic services." . . . "Wonderful, wonderful," said the first man. "So now your worries are all over" . . . "Who says I have no worries?" replied the one who had gone to England. "How about India?"

HEALTH: Monty Woolley recently was hospitalized. After a series of preliminary tests and injections he finally was operated on. Then more tests were made to determine whether the operation had been successful. "How do you feel?" one of the doctors asked him . . . "I feel," growled Woolley, "like an overworked vein of coal."

SPEECH: Norman Cousins, who had been working on "Project X," the forthcoming magazine, weighed staff-suggestions on what would be The Perfect Story for the first issue. They agreed that "Intimate Revelations of My Boyhood Reminiscences With J. Stalin" would be ideal. Cousins made a note of this on his memo pad.

The next day a representative of the Young Republican Club of New York, where Cousins is scheduled to make a speech next month, called his office and asked his secretary: "What will be the subject of Mr. Cousins' address?" The secretary glanced at the memo pad and recited the title. That's why the Young Republican Club sent a publicity release announcing that Norman Cousins' speech will be about "Intimate Revelations of My Boyhood Reminiscences With J. Stalin."

PREPARATION: The priceless documents on the Freedom Train are so old and delicate that 32,000 pounds of ice are consumed every 12 hours, to maintain the proper temperature throughout the cars. America's foremost safety experts worked so thoroughly to safeguard the documents that only a heavy bomb can damage the contents of the Freedom Train. Even if the train were immersed in water for one day, the documents would be unharmed.

It contains its own electrical power house and doesn't have to rely on standby power during exhibitions stops . . . Rodgers & Hammerstein and Frank Loesser are writing songs about the train, for exploitation in the winter and spring, after Irving Berlin's song is plugged out.
